A farmer in Missouri has been arrested for swindling a lawyer. It is not stated how he did it, but other farmers would like to know.

Probably Roosevelt fired his letter into the Congressional campaign in order to remove any lingering suspicion that he was not a stand-patter.

The Baltimore Sun ejaculates: "Peekaboo or no peekaboo? The eyes have it!" Most all men would like to be recorded as voting with the "eyes."

A dispatch from an Ohio town tells about a politician who is "100 years old and still alive and kicking." The fact that he is "kicking" shows that he is still up to date as a politician.

A lot of girls at Evansville, Ind., have organized "A Single Blessedness Club." The only way to break up a club like that is for the Young Men's Matrimonial Club to propose a merger.

With the policemen of Warsaw dodging bombs and keeping their eyes skinned to keep from getting a knife soused into their ribs, it is hardly necessary to ask "How would you like to be a policeman in Warsaw?"

A Greek proverb says: "Keep the common road and thou'rt safe." In spite of ancient advice like that, people think they are not in it unless they are seen coming down the pike at a gait that will attract the rubbernecks.

Dowie set the pace by claiming to be the incarnation of Elijah and now a man is setting up the claim that he is Adam. Men are the biggest cranks in the world. No woman would be caught acknowledging that she is old enough to palm herself off as Eve.

In his keynote campaign letter President Roosevelt praised Congress. This shows how easily the President forgets that Congress wouldn't stand for his pet measures and extracted the teeth of them before Congress would have anything to with them.

Hoke Smith who won the governorship in the Georgia primaries, is a North Carolinian, but that doesnt obliterate the regret that there is a possibility if not probability that Tom Watson may claim that Hoke would have got stranded if it hadn't been for Watson.

WANT DRAWBRIDGE

BANK'S CHANNEL TRESTLE

Owners and Masters of Pleasure Craft Want Unobstructed Course and File Petition With War Department—May Be Hearing.

Certain owners and sailing masters of the pleasure craft at Wrightsville Beach are giving the officials of the Consolidated Company no little concern over a petition they have filed with the United States Engineering Department in this city, asking that the company be required to put in and maintain a draw in the trestle over the Banks' Channel at Wrightsville Beach, so that boats of any size may pass up and down the course without obstruction. The petition to the government sets forth that Banks Channel is a navigable stream and that it should not be obstructed by a trestle of a private line and that vessels of whatever draft the course will accommodate should have free access to navigate the same. It is pointed out that when the trestle was first put across the channel, a draw bridge was required of the old Seacoast Railroad Company and that for many years the same was maintained but that subsequently the trestle was repaired and without authority the draw was closed.

The petition of the sailing masters and owners was filed in the Wilmington office of the United States Engineers some time ago but only until recently has it been pressed The petition has been referred to the War Department in Washington by Capt. R. P. Johnston, engineer in charge of the Wilmington district, and a decision is eagerly awaited. The Consolidated officials say that there is no real necessity for a draw in the trestle and are inclined to the position that ulterior motives are behind the movement. They say further that while the cost of the draw would be considerable, the chief objection would be the necessary delay to travel, inconveniencing the large number of the public who travel the line during the season. They say also that it would considerably lengthen the schedule time between Wilmington and the beach and would be a nuisance in that respect.

It is probable that when the matter comes officially before the War Department that a hearing on the question will be ordered and that all interests will be represented. This will hardly take place before the Summer season is well over and in case the decision should be adverse to the Consolidated Company, it will have the Winter to do the work. Another serious problem in putting in the draw will be the overhead wires which will also have to be taken down or some automatic arrangement provided by which the current can be transmitted to the cars underneath. It is expected that something definite in the matter will be known in a week or two.

WINSLOW IS NAMED

Will Succeed Capt. Johnston Temporarily in Charge of Wilmington District, Corps of U. S. Engineers—Formerly Here.

Capt. Evelynth E. Winslow, United States Army Engineers, now in charge of the Norfolk district and formerly on this station, has been assigned to temporary charge of the Wilmington district, United States Corps of Engineers, succeeding Capt. R. P. Johnston, resigned from the service. The appointment is understood to be effective on September 17th., the date Capt. Johnston's resignation will go into effect.

Capt. Winslow was in charge of the Wilmington district temporarily just prior to Capt. Johnson's appointment three years ago and was very popular with the business people of the town. When the Norfolk district office became vacant a few months later Capt. Winslow was assigned to that with supervision of the Wilmington district until Capt. Johnston took permanent charge. It is understood now that the Wilmington district will be only under the supervision of Capt. Winslow from the Norfolk office until a permanent commander is appointed for the Wilmington district.

Capt. Johnston is still north and is not expected here before he transfers the affairs of the office to Capt. Winslow. As soon after that time as possible it is expected that the War Department will make a permanent appointment to the place made vacant by the resignation of Capt. Johnston. There is said to be a great scarcity of competent men in the Engineering Corps of the United States Army and for this reason it is not always practicable to make an appointment at once. However, the temporary appointment of Capt. Winslow to have charge of the Wilmington district will give eminent satisfaction to the large interests affected and it is expected that Capt. Winslow will give much of his time to the affairs here.

DISORDERLY EXCURSIONIST.

Drew Metal Knucks on Suburban Conductor Who Asked Fare.

Will Gibson, one of the large number of excursionists in the city yesterday, was arrested on the suburban line yesterday afternoon on Conductor W. E. Beaton's car. The stranger was somewhat under the influence of liquor and offered to strike the car man with a pair of metal knucks when he insisted on payment of fare. Special Officer C. T. Croom was called, placed the passenger under arrest and turned him over to Constable Savage. Gibson was committed to jail to await a hearing before Justice Furlong to-morrow at noon on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

BIG EXCURSION DAY

Over Two Thousand Strangers on Four Trains—Spent Day at Beach, Returning Last Night—Travel on Suburban Line.

The town was full of excursionists yesterday and notwithstanding the periodical stunts of our old friend Jupiter Pluvius all day, the visitors seemed to have enjoyed themselves immensely, a large majority of them spending their time at the beach. Trains of three cars on the suburban line were crowded all the afternoon and the traffic seemed to have been handled well by the Consolidated Company. There were four special trains in to bring the strangers and the points whence they came were Raleigh, over the Raleigh and Southport to Fayetteville, thence over the A. & Y., to Wilmington; Stedman, over the A. & Y., also; Wadesboro and Rockingham over the Seaboard Air Line, and Latta, S. C., over the W., C. & A. railroad. In the main the excursionists were well behaved and but few arrests were made from among their number.

The train from Raleigh brought the Tabernacle Baptist excursion and consisted of eight or ten coaches well filled. The Wadesboro and Rockingham excursion was perhaps the largest. It brought 650 people and was in charge of Mr. W. P. Clements excursion manager for the road. The Stedman party numbered about 375. The party from Latta was composed of whites and colored and was comparatively small. All told it is estimated that there were over 2,000 of the excursionists in the city during the day. All the trains returned last night on schedule time.

The First Baptist Church.

Dr. W. W. Hamilton, head evangelist of the Home Mission Board at Atlanta, is expected here about the middle of October to conduct a series of revival services for the Winter. Beginning October 1st. the Kneissel Orchestra will play for the Sunday School each Sunday afternoon. The quartette engaged for the regular church services is composed of Mrs. Muse, Mrs. Edwards, Mr. W. B. Muse and Mr. Stanley.

No Game at Lake Waccamaw.

On account of the wet condition of the grounds, the baseball game between Wilmington and Lake Waccamaw on the grounds of the latter yesterday afternoon was not played. At the end of the third inning the game was called with the Lake 6 to 1 the winner. The two teams will play in Wilmington on Labor Day and a fine game is assured as both teams are strong and confident. The Wilmington team returned on the late train last night.

ON LIQUOR QUESTION

Mandamus Compelling Raleigh Aldermen to Call Prohibition Election Asked.

VETERANS AT MOREHEAD

All Old Officers Re-Elected—Report of Text Book Commission—Cars Wanted at High Point—Other State Capital Notes.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Raleigh, N. C., August 25.—Proceedings against the Raleigh Board of Aldermen were begun here this afternoon for a mandamus compelling the Aldermen to order an election on the question of "Dispensary" or "Prohibition" in accordance with the petition presented by Rev. S. J. Betts and which was at the time turned down by the Aldermen on the ground that there was no provision in the Watts or Ward Acts for an election to vote on prohibition. The complaint sets out that the petition was regular in every respect and the point raised by the Aldermen in turning it down has no foundation in law. Counsel for Rev. Betts and associates are ex-Associate Justice of the Supreme Court W. A. Montgomery and Col. J. C. L. Harris. The petition for the mandamus will be heard at Smithfield September 10th, by Judge Webb.

This is the fight on which a remarkable condition exists in that the element of citizenship which led the fight for the present dispensary as a stepping stone to prohibition is opposing the prohibition election at this time and the fight for the election is backed by the city administration and will be supported by the saloon element as well as the faction of regular prohibition advocates.

Adjutant General H. A. London, of the North Carolina Division, United Confederate Veterans, spent the day here returning from the encampment of the North Carolina Division at Morehead and reports a most pleasant re-union of the old soldiers although the attendance was not as large as was hoped for. All the old officers were re-elected: Gen. J. S. Carr, Durham, Commander; Brigadier Generals, First Brigade, Gen. P. Carlton, Statesville; Second Brigade Gen. W. L. London, Pittsboro; Third Brigade, Gen. J. I. Metts, Wilmington; Fourth Brigade, Gen. J. M. Ray, Asheville.

A fund of $300 was raised toward a North Carolina memorial window in the old Blandford church at Petersburg. Gen. T. S. Garnett, commander of the Virginia Division, was a guest of honor and delivered a stirring address which inaugurated a new slogan among the North Carolina veterans—"On to Richmond in 1907" for the great re-union.

Contrary to the general expectation the hearing of book publishers by the text book Commission on books offered for adoption in the public schools was concluded to-day at noon. The commission will begin executive sessions Monday for the discussion of the merits of the books. It is not known just when the adoption will take place. The adoption involves something like five million dollars a year.

The North Carolina Corporation Commission announces that a session of the Commission will be held in High Point on the question of the furniture car famine which is declared by the manufacturers to be imminent. A telegram received last evening by the Commission from President F. A. Tate, of the Furniture Manufacturers' Association declared that the situation is now worse than it was a year ago when a similar course was taken by the Commission with the result that the shortage was overcome by the railroad company by special effort at the instance of the Commission.

MOONLIGHT TO THE "ROCKS."

Delightful Trip is Assured for Tuesday Night, This Week.

A delightful treat is in store for those who go on the moonlight excursion Tuesday evening to the "Rocks" and return on the steamer Wilmington. It will be under the auspices of Bladen Street M. E. church and all friends and the public are invited. The steamer leaves her pier at 8 P. M., and will return about 11 o'clock. Refreshments will be served on board, and there will be lots of amusement and entertainment for the young people who will be especially interested. The Bladen Street Quartette will render several selections during the evening.

—Mr. N. Courtland Curtis, of Chapel Hill, was among yesterday's arrivals in the city.

MAY ANNEX CUBA.

The Chattanooga Times remarks:

"The United States government has unofficially notified the Cuban government that there will be no interference in the little family quarrel on that island and that the latter will have to take care of itself. The next time Uncle Sam mixes up in the affairs of Cuba he ought to take it over—bag and baggage—convert it into American territory and thus put it beyond the possibility of future revolutionary disturbances. Maybe that is what the government at Washington means by leaving the island for the present to its own devices."

In all probability that is what will finally come—annexation. It is strange that the Cubans have not been knocking at the door before this.

The policy of this government at present is to let Cuba take care of its own insurrection, but the news from Havana on Thursday night mentioned a circumstance which would cause Uncle Sam to go after the insurgent commander in Pinar del Rio Pro-belongs to Americans and the insurgent chief sent the railroad officials word that they were in charge of the station and if any more troops were sent out over the railroad after him, he would blow up the railroad bridges. In a case like that the United States would be pretty apt to interfere. Probably that is what the insurgents would prefer.

vince. The railroad running out there

Although defeated in his ambition to be Governor of Georgia, Editor Clark Howell is not at all grouchy. He made a hot fight and is now ready to support Hoke Smith who carried 118 out of the 145 counties of Georgia. In a personal editorial of great length published in the Atlanta Constitution on Wednesday, Mr. Howell concludes as follows:

"Now that it is all over, the best thing for us all to do is to accept the result and pull together for the welfare of the State.

"I renew my pledge of heart, hand and head, to the perpetuation of its glory.

"Georgia is 'good enough for me,' whoever may be her chief executive. I have never yet sought the shadow in defeat, and it is too late to begin now Whatever happens I prefer to live in the sunshine of the sentiment so aptly expressed by Stanton:

"This old world we're livin' in
Is mighty hard to beat;
We get a thorn with every rose,
But—ain't the roses sweet!"

"Defeat is the thorn today, but I would not exchange it for the friendships that have been so generously manifested in this campaign They are the roses that make defeat easy!"

The above indicates that Howell is no small man. There is no evidence that he will sulk in his tent or become an insurgent.

It is announced that Dr. Edwin Anderson Alderman, president of the University of Virginia, will deliver the annual address before the New England Society on Forefathers' Day, the 22nd of December next. The address will be delivered in New York city, and other prominent speakers will include the General of the Army, the Admiral of the Navy and the Governor of Massachusetts.

An important rumor is given by the Richmond News Leader to the effect that the Wabash system (the Gould road) will parallel the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad. Two routes have been surveyed. At present the Seaboard, Southern and Atlantic Coast Line use the R. F. & P. out of Washington, and it is being double tracked.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—Old Neptune, at his worst, will probably not be able to make Mr. Bryan throw up his political aspirations.—Washington Post.

—It is reported that a Philadelphia girl is to marry the Duke of Alva. It is to be hoped that the present holder of that title is a better man than his famous ancestor, whose name was held in horror throughout Western Europe a few centuries ago.—Philadelphia Press.

—It is said that houses are rented in Raleigh by respectable people for disrespectable purposes in the heart of Raleigh. The police ought to know, they can know, and it can be stopped in every part of Raleigh if all the city authorities are resolved to stop it.—Raleigh News and Observer.

—The Greensboro Record, referring to the result of the Georgia primaries, says that "Hoke Brown or Hoke Jones could have won just as easily under the same conditions and on the same kind of a platform, to-wit: agin railroads, niggers and the rest." A wholly correct statement embodied in a very neatly turned sentence.—Charlotte Observer.

—For the first time since 1876 the people of South Carolina are to vote on the clean-cut issue between honesty and dishonesty. The stumping tour of the candidates ended in Laurens yesterday and it remains for the Democratic party to decide next Tuesday whether it will sustain the State dispensary and dishonesty inseparable from it or honest government as represented by the opposition. There is no other issue.—Charleston News and Courier.

—While there is considerable discussion of our stand-pat President, there is no possible occasion for surprise over his attitude. Mr. Roosevelt's choice was made as far back as when he decided upon his railroad rate campaign. The support of Speaker Cannon for that scheme of operations was obviously conditioned upon the policy of leaving the tariff inviolate. The tariff, too, has a heap more friends than the railroads. The tariff has become a religion. Palsied be the hand that touches it!—Springfield Republican.

—Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, spoke at Seven Hills Chautaqua last night. He was given a most cordial welcome, and his accusations against those who were responsible for a better railroad bill not being adopted by Congress were enthusiastically applauded. In giving the review of the rate bill he related the incident which caused him to "cut" the acquaintance of President Roosevelt. "If I was a gentlemen when McLaurin called me a liar I was more of a gentleman after I had resented it," said the Senator. He declared that no well-bred gentleman would have recalled an invitation and that he would never speak to Roosevelt again until he apologized. In the matter of the rate bill he said that Roosevelt surrendered, walked down and gave up.—Owensboro (Ky.) Specia l Louisville Courier-Journal.

GREAT BLESSING TO HARD DRINKERS

Record Made By North Carolina in Five Years Compared With any State in Union—United States Statistics.

The Keeley Institute, Greensboro, N. C.:

It is with peculiar pride that I am now looking over some of your literature and thinking of the time I was at your Institute; and I just feel like saying that the half has never yet been told in singing the praises that your Institute so much deserves. It has been four years since I took the treatment, and I have not tasted a drop of whiskey or anything of the kind, and would not for the world; in fact I don't want it, and if I had the time I would like to come and stay at your Institute for thirty days now, and rest and enjoy myself with you all again. I want to say to you that I never will forget your kindness to me when I was there. Col. Osborne the physician and the attendants—you all—certainly did treat me very nicely, and then, when I think of the condition I was in when to the Insti- condition I was in when I went to the Institution and the condition I am in now, it makes me feel like praising God that he ever put it in power and hearts of men to establish such an Institute where poor, fallen men might go and restore themselves to their families, their country, and their friends. I just feel like saying that none know the awful condition of men who have contracted the disease of drink but those who have tried it, and I would to God that I could advise and influence every man who has this awful habit or disease to go to the Keeley Institute and be cured. He certainly will not regret the time, and so far as the money is concerned he will make that back so soon that he will not miss it. I have been and expect to try to influence all my friends that are thus afflicted to take your treatment and be cured. I just feel like it has been, to sum it up in a nut shell, all and all to me.

The natty little launch, Atlanta, of the Tarrymoore fleet, has never taken out a more congenial party than it did last week. A trip outside was made and the ladies and gentlemen of the party enjoyed the pleasure of deep sea fishing, making some fine catches and enjoyed the sport immensely. They returned to the channel waters and cruised up and down the pretty stream with its waters changing color as the clouds passed between it and the sun. Those in the party were: Mr. and Mrs. James A. Jones, Miss Susie Hooper, Miss Mabel Cuthbertson, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Thomas (of Charlotte), and Miss Mary Thomas (of Rockingham).

Mr. Hinton, the genial proprietor of the Seashore, stands in with the children in the hotel and each week gives them an entertainment of some kind, in which the "grown folks are not allowed to interfere. Week before last they were entertained at a donkey party and last week a domino party was contemplated, but the mothers thought the little tots would look so much better in a more becoming or picuresque costume, and the kimona was substituted for the domino. At all events, substitution or no substitution, the little ones spent a pleasant evening and their happy hearts were made lighter and happier by Mr. Hinton's kindly thoughts. Par parenthesis, we will say the children do not interfere with the grown folks' dances.

September is really one of the pleasantest months on the seashore, and for this reason as well as to accommodate the large number of persons who wish to spend some time at our popular Summer resort, the proprietor of the Tarrymoore has decided to keep his excellent hostelry open until October. During September fishing is unusually fine and the high tides make marsh hen shooting a pleasure to sportsmen. No effort will be spared to make September guests happy and comfortable. Vade Mecum, N. C., August 21.—One of the most delightful social features of the season at Vade Mecum was the "Baby Party" Friday night. The party was planned by Mrs. Vollers, of Wilmington. Misses Vollers, Shipley, Shober, Mugge, Ortman, Shaw, Mrs. Oliver and Messrs. Gene Hill, Ed. Whitaker and June Potts were the babies. The nurses were Misses Millner, Mrs. Kearns, Miss Whitaker, who had quite a time taking care of their babies, who were continually in a bad humor and crying for their bottles. The "babies" marched in, led by Miss Shipley and Mr. Potts, while Mrs. Vollers brought up the rear with a baby carriage. Several of the prettiest german figures were danced.

Another evening of delight was afforded the guests when some of the young men, under the direction of Prof. Whitaker, impersonated the ladies, the old-time darkey, the newspaper characters, Buster Brown and the Yellow Kid. Mr. Rudolph Carlisle as Happy Hooligan was declared the finest character in the lot.

Picnic parties on the mountains, notwithstanding the heavy rains, fishing, boating and card-playing and dancing are still the most popular amusements. Prof. Whitaker's orchestra is furnishing delightful concerts every day.

The week's arrivals include: Mrs. E. Bencini, Rome, Italy; C. S. Johnson, East Bend; A. S. Kirby and Mrs. L. Kirby, Phoenix, N. C.; John Snodgrass, Scottsboro, Ala.; Jas. McNeill, Tampa, Fla.; Dr. H. A. Brown and Miss Eloise Brown, Winston-Salem, N. C.; C. R. Hoskins, Winston; Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hall and son, Reidsville; C. M. Linville, Virginia; R. C. Morris, Kernersville; J. F. "Y's all other Y's," the year book of Converse College for 1906, is a very attractive number, containing many very bright things, besides the pictures of nearly all of the fair pupils of the college. There are many very nice and witty things said of the young ladies from this city and the pictures of each of them is printed more than once in the book, attesting in a measure the popularity of "our girls" among their friends. In a very attractive grouping of the "Tar Heel Club" good likenesses of Misses Elizabeth McQueen, Annie Worth, Marguerite Holladay and Fanny Murchison are given, together with other young ladies of this State. Another picture is "The Debators." In this picture Miss Bessie Bridgers is proudly asserting "That North Carolina is Carolina." The next is "The Pirates," in which Miss Mannie Holladay is pleading for mercy to a stern looking (?) but very attractive, judge, who has on her dress the unlucky 13 and a large key. Still another is the "Converse Co-Eds," in which "The Bunch," five very pretty girls, wear boy's caps and coats and look very saucy in them. Wilmington in this group is represented by "Pete" Bridgers, of "The Bunch." "The Regiment" is another picture, in which Miss Agnes McQueen is Adjutant; Miss Fannie Murchison, First Lieutenant; Miss Marguerite Holladay and Miss Annie Worth are Cadets. They all look very natty in their coats of blue and becoming caps. In the "Slippers" is Miss Fannie Murchison while Miss Bessie Bridgers appears in the "Mummers." Emblazoned across the top of a page is "Wilmington Girls," and beneath it are good pictures of the seven young ladies of this city in pretty tennis costumes standing in graceful poses on the court. The last of the pictures in which any of the Wilmington girls appear is "The Quartette," whose motto is, "Never Trouble Trouble, Till Trouble Troubles You." From the roguish look of the eyes and the tantalizing pretty mouths, of the Quartette, it would be safe to surmise that one would have trouble, more trouble, lots of trouble, if their motto was not heeded.

IN THE GRAPEVINE ARBOR

By FRANK H. SWEET

Copyright, 1906, by Frank H. Sweet

KETURAH ALLEN sat out under the grapevine arbor knitting. It was only 9 o'clock in the morning—an un-Christian hour to knit, as most busy housewives would have said and which Keturah herself acknowledged in the depths of her lonely, disquieted heart. But what could she do? Since the conqueror came she had no recourse against time except knitting and missionary work, and even her charity loving heart could not find the shadow of an excuse for making poor calls this morning.

"OH, MISS KETURAH, HAVE YOU HEARD THE NEWS?"

Meadowville was a small place, and since the Ladies' Missionary society and the Children's Missionary band had been organized the two or three poor families had found it a sinecure to keep their poverty before the public. Even the most liberal of the work lovers were forced to admit that their proteges were becoming more and more shiftless and lazy.

Keturah loved charity work and hated knitting, and it was this same hate that made her cling to it so assiduously. If she had lived in the right age her sensitive conscience would have provided her with sackcloth and ashes.

It was in the lush of middle June and the odors of honeysuckles and roses were mingled with those of ripening strawberries and pungent garden herbs. Pollen dusted bees and iridescent butterflies flitted about in the sunshine, and among the tendrils of the grapevine above her head was the half concealed nest of a yellow warbler. Nothing was afraid of Keturah. Even now one of the warblers was twittering a contemplative interlude not three feet away from her clicking needles.

But Keturah was in a disturbed frame of mind this morning and was not even conscious of her tiny friend's presence. She could hear the conqueror bustling about in the kitchen—her kitchen now—rattling dishes, opening and shutting oven doors, whistling—yes, actually whistling—to the canary bird and now and then indulging in a snatch of high pitched, breezy song. Keturah listened with mingled emotions. The conqueror was a splendid housekeeper—she was glad to admit that, both for her brother and her conscience's sake—but she was so energetic and so strongminded and so capable! She did all her housework and looked after the poultry and flower garden. She was president of the Missionary society and found plenty of time to visit and receive calls. Keturah admired her vastly and even liked her in a rebuffed sort of way, but somehow, even from her vantage ground of inside spectator, she could never quite understand how one woman could accomplish so much. Every morning her conscience made her offer to help with the work, and every morning the conqueror looked at her with a calmly superior air and said that slow help was a bother.

And that is why Keturah's mornings were spent in this grapevine arbor or out making poor calls. She wanted to like the conqueror and tried to with all the strength of her tender, shrinking heart. Was she not her brother's wife and her own sister-in-law, and was she not the best housekeeper and the most capable manager in Meadowville? But even with all these attractions Keturah could not force her sensitive, refined nerves to ignore this new order of bustle and energy and self assertion.

And there was another thing. For three and twenty years Keturah had been the undisputed mistress of the establishment, doing the work in her quiet, prim, ladylike way and never dreaming that the years would bring other change than what rightfully belonged to them. She had been housekeeper for her father until he died and then for her brother, and, although she had once thought—and hoped—that her brother might marry, such a possibility had gradually been lost sight of. He had just passed his fortieth birthday and she her forty-third when the conqueror came.

Keturah was not combative, and she honestly tried to take the new order of things according to the light her conscience dictated, but her resolutions were not as strong as the nature handed down by half a dozen generations of ancestors. At the end of a month she had gone to her brother and asked for her share of the property, so that she might go off and live by herself. At first he had been incredulous, then sarcastic. Their father had expressed a hope that the property would not be divided, he had told her, and, besides, he could not let her have her share without selling the homestead, and he would not do that. And, furthermore, he had advanced the unnecessary argument that she was too old to live by herself. She had winced a little at this thrust. It sounded so like the bristling assertions of the conqueror that she turned away hurt and silenced.

But it was true, she told herself remorselessly. She was getting to be quite an old woman. And she went to the glass to overwhelm her worldliness with a proof of the fact, but somehow the glass did not carry out the sentence of the assertion. Her skin was still soft, and her cheeks had the same delicate flush that had made her a belle in the faroff days of her girlhood, and there was not a single gray intruder among all the glossy brown hair that was coiled and massed upon her head.

She was thinking of her future now as she sat under the grapevine arbor listening to the self assertive work of the conqueror in the kitchen and oblivious of the persuasive twittering at her side. Deep down in her heart she was trying to steel herself to something desperate, to go away, to seek employment—anything. If her brother would not give up her share of the property she would surely be able to earn a living somewhere.

A quick step on the gravel walk brought her eyes from the needles and her thoughts from the future.

"Oh, here you are, Miss Keturah. I've looked for you everywhere." And Florence, the conqueror's sister, bustled into the arbor and plumped herself down on the seat beside Keturah. Florence was eighteen, very vivacious, very dumpy and very much in love with herself. Added to this, she was the pride and admiration of the conqueror's heart.

"Oh, Miss Keturah, have you heard the news?" she cried as soon as she could get her breath. "The Rev. Charles Barden, missionary to Japan, is coming to Meadowville and is going to lecture to the people here next week and is coming here to stay. What do you think of that? Going to stay here with us a whole week."

Keturah rose quickly and then sat down and began to ply her needles with desperate energy. She did not even notice that she was knitting back over the same needle.

"What do you mean, child?" she gasped in a voice that she intended to be calm. "How do you know?"

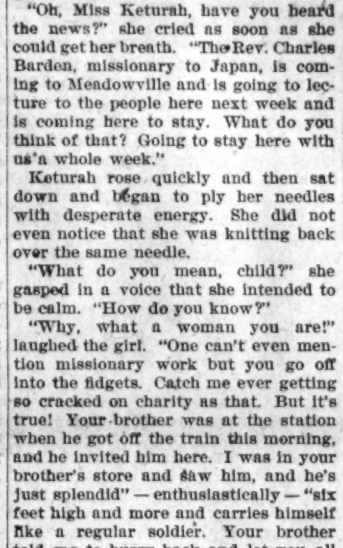
"Why, what a woman you are!" laughed the girl. "One can't even mention missionary work but you go off into the fidgets. Catch me ever getting so cracked on charity as that. But it's true! Your brother was at the station when he got off the train this morning, and he invited him here. I was in your brother's store and saw him, and he's just splendid"—enthusiastically—"six feet high and more and carries himself like a regular soldier. Your brother told me to hurry back and let you all know he was coming." She was silent for a few moments, with a self satisfied smile on her pretty face, then burst out with: "I'm going to set my cap for him. I'm just sick and tired of this poky place, and I always did want to go to Japan and China and them foreign countries."

"Child, child!" remonstrated Keturah. "He's more than twice your age."

"Only forty-five," said the girl perversely. "I heard him tell your brother so. That's just the right age in a man. And there's nobody round here can hold a candle to him. I don't believe there are many real handsome women in Japan, and you know, Miss Keturah, a smart girl can do almost anything with a man in a week."

"Maybe he's married, child."

"No, he ain't, for your brother asked him. He keeps house and has a Chinaman to cook and do his work. My sister says I must look sharp, for he's the best catch there ever was in this town. He's awful rich, even if he is a missionary."



"I'M GLAD TO SEE YOU, CHARLES," SHE SAID.

She was silent again for some minutes, tapping her foot complacently against the rustic work of the arbor. Then she looked at Keturah with sudden interest.

"He said he used to live here when he was a young man. Did you know him, Miss Keturah? You must be old enough to remember most everything."

"He went to school with brother and me," said Keturah quietly. "He used to live in that house across the street. I believe he was considered a very nice young man then"—

"I should think so," scornfully. "At any rate, he's the finest man I ever saw. But there they come now!" And she hurried away as two men turned in the gate and came leisurely up the gravel walk toward the house.

Keturah did not rise. But half an hour later she was conscious, without looking up, that some one had left the house and was coming directly toward the grapevine arbor.

"Miss Keturah." And she rose calmly and gave him her hand.

"I'm glad to see you, Charles," she said cordially. "It's been a long time since you were here."

"Yes, a long time." Then Florence bustled into the arbor and bore him off to look at the flower garden.

The next few days Keturah saw very little of him. Florence had him in charge most of the time—making poor calls, wandering about the fields or on the piazza chatting of the delights of travel and missionary work. But on the fifth day Florence was obliged to go to her dressmaker to try on an elaborate costume she was having made for the missionary meeting. While she was gone the Rev. Charles Barden found his way across the lawn to the grapevine arbor, where Keturah sat knitting. She greeted him quietly and made room for him on the seat beside her.

"I haven't seen so much of you as I hoped," he began as he sat down.

"There's been considerable going on," she said.

"Yes. I have been trying to get a chance to speak with you alone, but this is my first opportunity. Do you remember our last conversation—before I left?"

She did not answer, but her needles began to click more rapidly.

"It was in this very arbor, you remember, twenty-five years ago, I asked you to go away with me, and you said that your father was growing old and needed you and that it would not be right to leave him. Keturah, will you go back with me now? Your father is dead, and your brother is provided for. No one needs you here."

"KETURAH IS GOING BACK WITH ME."

The knitting work fell to the ground unheeded, and a warm, rich color stole into her face.

"But I am getting to be an old woman now, and you are in the prime of life."

"Ah, indeed!" quizzingly. "I am forty-five, and you are forty-three. Just the same difference between us as there was twenty-five years ago. Will you go back with me?"

But still her conscience made her demur.

"Would not a younger woman do you more good, Charles?"

"I want you, Keturah," the grave voice growing more earnest and tender. "I wanted you twenty-five years ago. I want you now. I shall want you always. Will you go back with me?"

"Yes."

At the supper table that evening the Rev. Charles Barden looked across at his host.

"I believe that I haven't yet told you, John, that Keturah is going back with me," he said composedly.

"No? You don't mean it?" And John Allen looked from one to the other in incredulous amazement. "But, really, Charles, I congratulate you. She is a fine woman, if I do say it."

The Logan Stone of Land's End.

The most celebrated rocking stone in England is that known as the Logan, Loggan or Logging stone. It is situated on the summit of a bold promontory of granite about eleven miles from Land's End, in Mount's bay, Cornwall. It is estimated to weigh about ninety tons. Yet it is so nicely balanced that a child can move it with one hand. The pivot upon which the stone rests is a small, hard protrusion, on all sides of which the whole surrounding surface has worn away, leaving the enormous bowlder standing upon a narrow neck so exactly and evenly poised that a touch sets the whole mass to rocking. In the legendary lore of Penzance there is a prophecy to the effect that the Logan stone will stand until the day of the end of the world, when it will fall of its own accord just before and as a token of the ending of all earthly things. Several years ago a young English lieutenant, who did not believe in prophecies, hired a force of men, who repaired to the spot and with ropes, crowbars and levers threw the great stone from its pinnacle. When the authorities heard of the destruction of the old landmark they forced the young officer at great expense to replace the stone just as he had found it. Some claim that the poise is not so equal now as it was before the incident just related.

STEEL CARS ON RAILROADS PROMISE OF THE FUTURE

Recent Experiment With Southern Railway Coach Promises Revolution in Construction—Structures That Will Be Wreck Proof

Philadelphia, August 18.—"All future passenger equipment of the Pennsylvania Railroad will be made of steel. The necessity of providing non-collapsible, absolutely fireproof passenger cars for the New York tunnel has simply hastened the day when this transformation must take place. The car of the future must be as safe as engineering science can make it."

Such is the declaration authorized by a high official in the motive-power department of the Pennsylvania Railroad. It followed examination of reports which have been made on the cost and performance of the new Pennsylvania coach, No. 1651, the first all-steel passenger car to be built in the world. This car has been placed temporarily on one of the company's regular runs, and most minute reports are being made as to its work.

The future passenger equipment is to be of steel, therefore, not only steel frame and box, but steel and non-combustible material in every particular. This will involve a very large expenditure of money, but the management feels that no expense should be spared to remove the danger from fire and collision in future railroading.

The decision now definitely reached will call for about 1,000 unburnable railroad company cars to be ready when the New York tunnel is completed. It will also call for some 500 Pullmans, which must also be of completely non-combustible construction. At the request of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Pullman Company is now building the first all-steel sleeper ever constructed. It will be inspected by the Pennsylvania officials at a very early date.

Railroad officials and travellers generally have been keenly interested in the result of the Pennsylvania's experiment with a new car. Other so-called steel coaches have been built—notably for the New York subway—but they have been only partly of steel. The first car to be built anywhere wherein the main object has been to secure the elimination of every particle of non-combustible material is No. 1651, the reports on which are just now in shape to make it possible to base definite future action upon them.

The new car weighs 103,550 pounds against 84,900 for the standard wooden coach, but it is found that the added weight very greatly reduces the vibration and adds to the comfort of the passengers. No inconsiderable part of the additional weight is due to the great burden involved in carrying storage batteries and battery boxes. All the new cars are to be lighted by electricity, and the Pennsylvania will carry no gas illuminated cars of any kind into its New York tunnel. The electric wires in the new cars are all thoroughly insulated in heavy metal conduits, thus adding to the safety.

Motive power official believe that the weight of the present car can be still further reduced, although it will always be heavier than the wooden coach. Coach No. 1651 has a small quantity of combustible material and in the effort to remove this absolutely, it may be necessary to add weight in slight particulars.

The new car is absolutely non-collapsible. It could stand any load or any collision. Its hidden frame, is like a cantilever bridge, suspended on the trucks as piers. This safety against telescoping is secured by the use of enormous steel girders, the principal feature in the body of the car being a central box girder twenty-four inches wide by nineteen inches deep extending through the length of the coach.

In the past railroads have found that when trains collided and the body of one car rose above the body of the next, there was a tendency for the underframe of the first car to sweep the underframe. In the new equipment this is prevented by the extraordinary strength in the door and vestibule endposts, which are, of course, of very heavy rolled steel.

To show something of the effort made to make this car absolutely fireproof, it is only necessary to state that the flooring throughout the car and platform, consists of an imitation of stone spread while in a plastic state over the steel plates of the car. The framing above the windows is composed of steel plates. The doors are composed of steel plates pressed into a shape imitating the wooden doors used in other cars and filled with cork to deaden the sound. The roof is constructed of composite boards covered with copper sheathing. The inside lining consists of composite boards covered with fireproof paint.

It is the policy of the Pennsylvania to eliminate eventually even the smallest amount of wood or other burnable material in its cars. In the experimental car the seats are of steel frame covered with fireproof plush. The foot rests are also of steel. For the present the arm rests are of wood, but experiments are now being made with various metals in the effort to secure a non-combustible material which will not be cold to the touch.

A coupler arrangement of a new type, stronger than anything ever used before, has been designed for this car to avoid any possibility of breakage and the resultant parting of trains.

In the planning of this car, no expense has been spared to build a coach which should provide the greatest possible strength; a steel framing which could not be effected by fire; an inside lining which should be absolutely unburnable, and at the same time, would not conduct heat or sound.

The company has been making elaborate tests to ascertain the effect of the temperature of the atmosphere of the steel, as compared with the old wooden car. It is found that in hot weather the difference is very slight, and that the steel car shows a decided inclination to cool off more rapidly than the wooden coach.

LEWIS MORRISON DEAD.

Well-Known Actor Succumbs Suddenly After Operation.

(New York Herald, 20th.)

Lewis Morrison, an actor, whose work as Mephisto in "Faust" gained him fame, died suddenly of shock on Saturday afternoon in St. John's Hospital, Yonkers, after undergoing an operation for stomach trouble.

Taken ill suddenly last week, Mr. Morrison was informed by his physicians that an immediate operation was necessary to save his life. He was under engagement to start for San Francisco on Friday, but wired that he would delay a few days. He cheerfully went to the operating table. He recovered from the influence of the ether administered to him, but the shock proved too much for a man of his age—sixty-one years—and early in the afternoon, surrounded by his family, he passed away.

Mr. Morrison resided each Summer with his daughter, Miss Rosabel Morrison, at Neperham Heights. She, with his other daughter, Mabel, wife of Richard Bennett; Mr. Bennett and his wife, Florence Roberts, were at his bedside when the end came.

Few members of the theatrical profession were more widely known in the United States and Canada than Mr. Morrison. He was born of English parentage in Kingston, Jamaica, W. I., in 1845. He came to this country at an early age and enlisted on the Union side in the Civil War. He rose to the rank of lieutenant, and on his honorable discharge at the close of the war he received the rank of captain for distinguished service. He won the personal friendship and praise of General Grant during the siege of Vicksburg, when he swam the Mississippi under the fire of the batteries with dispatches for the Federal army.

After his discharge from the army Mr. Morrison entered the theatrical profession as an actor in the old Varieties Theatre, New Orleans, making his first appearance with Lawrence Barrett in 1865. He was afterwards associated with Edwin Booth, Edwin Forrest, Tomaso Salvini, Adelaide Neilson, Charlotte Cushman, Janauschek, Rose Coghlan and Agnes Booth.

During his career Mr. Morrison played Laertes to Booth's Hamlet, Edgar to Forrest's King Lear, Iago to Salvini's Othello, Romeo to Adelaide Neilson's Juliet, Macduff to Charlotte Cushman's Lady Macbeth, and a host of other leading roles. He was also associated for nine years as leading man with the old Walnut Street Theatre Stock Company, in Philadelphia, playing alternately with Charles Wolcott, after which he came to New York and created the title part of "Victor Durand," a performance which is still remembered by old New Yorkers and which stamped him immediately as among the best actors of the country. It was with this role that Richard Mansfield also won the first triumph of his career.

Because of a contract with Al. Hayman, in San Francisco, Mr. Morrison left New York just before his one hundredth performance in "Victor Durand." He became associate leading man in the old California Theatre Stock Company, and was there associated with such players as John McCullough, Bartley McCullum, W. H. Bishop, James O'Neill, Jeffries Lewis and Kate Meek. He then took up Faust, with himself as Mephisto, and for fully twenty years starred this country and Canada with wonderful success and popularity. He was to Faust what Jefferson was to Rip Van Winkle.

Funeral services will be held at Neperham Heights to-day. The body will be temporarily placed in a receiving vault at Mount Hope cemetery.

THE TRAMPS ABROAD

He Comes With the Cuckoo and Summer is His Season—Like the Hedgehog, He Hibernates, But Usually in Jail.

(London Saturday Review.)

Southern England is the paradise of the sturdy tramp. As a rule he comes in with the cuckoo; in the merry months of mid-Summer he is in his glory, and like the hedgehog and the squirrel he goes into winter quarters in one of his Majesty's jails or elsewhere. Experience teaches him that spells of enforced restraint send him back to his irregularities with renewed zest. As one of the guild remarked to Dickens in a confidential talk, the hours and the diet, "which is regular, mind ye, freshens a cove up a bit and does him good." In the springtime the good of a fair land is before him, and the spirit of improvident adventure is strong as the sap in the trees. The nature for which he has not great sentimental affection offers him the key of the woods and the fields with the run of the field barns and outlying cattle sheds as alternatives in a climate the reverse of stable.

The tramp we have often been inclined to envy is a genuine English type. In Holland there are no hills and in Belgium there is no elbow room. Fancy making a pilgrimage of professional pleasure over the dusty roads of northern France, between the grim double hedges of poplars; across the arid plains of the Castiles, or through the forests or marshes of limitless Russia. In southern Europe local mendicity defies all alien competition. Germany, with its streams and woodlands, would be an inviting country enough and the peasants are kindly and hospitable. But in Germany, beyond any other country, the authorities are inquisitive about papers and vouchers of respectability. The only licensed beggars there were the Handelsburchen, and even they under the empire are dying out.

Even in England, as we remark regretfully, the profession is not what it was. The constabulary give trouble and are apt to run a cove in for sleeping out with no coppers in his pockets. But the tramp who is worth his salt is as careless of the constabulary and their traps as Cooper's Hawkeye of the Mingoes with their diabolical wiles. Like the scout of the pre-Republican wars in America he ought to be up to every dodge of the enemy for the tramp, like the poet, nascitur non fit. He should be sound in wind and limb, shrewd of brain, light of spirits and of the happy-go-lucky temperament that takes no thought of the morrow. He should have the enviable vaculty of mind which carries him cherrily along a somewhat monotonous round without the sense of boredom. In camping for the night his instincts lead him to the most picturesque situations, though probably for practical reasons. He may not look with the artist's eye on the yellow green foliage of the spreading oak, but it is as effective against the heavy passing shower as the best bell-tent from Edginton's.

The dense undergrowth of bramble and dog-rose screens himself and his fire from the wind that has got up and is blowing from the cold quarter. He has his favorite resorts in his rounds, and you may know when he is at home by the thin column of smoke curling high above the tree tops. He generally camps near water, though not for purposes of ablution, but the kettle must be filled and he has his own ways of regarding surrounding objects. The noisy nighingales that disturb his settling to sleep are suggestive of twigs and birdline; and the thrushes and linnets that serenade him when he awakees at early dawn are so many shillings or half-crowns hopping over the turf and among the branches. But business must be attended to, so he makes his toilet with a shake of his rags and sets forth hopefuly on his daily peregrinations.

Tempted by his example, I have tried tramping myself in amateur fashion, but with unsatisfactory results. There was the inevitable drawback of money in your purse and in populous England the trouble of fighting the seductions of some snug little inn within easy reach. As your bread was certain and your beer sure you missed the saving elements of doubt and excitement. In the wilds of Scotland you are somewhat better off. I have slept under the Shelter Stone of Mar Forest among Campbell's "high Cairngorms." When after deer in the Outer Hebrides I have harbored in a low-browed cavern with the sombre insinuations of a smuggler's den and a Keltic burial vault, and I have laid out in a plaid on the hill in the heather. The sounds of the night and the sense of the loneliness are eerie enough—the moan of the Atlantic surf on the shore, the wail of the plover or the bark of the dog fox. But the portmanteau of some adjacent base of operations bothered you, and though you might be woke up by the scream of the eagle instead of the crow of the cock, from dreams that had an uncanny resemblence to nightmares, you had a discouraging sense that it was not the real thing.

As a boy, always envied Borrow, a born vagabond, if ever there was one, when he chaffered for the tinker's cart and little horse and started wandering tinker on his own account. He shed the slough of civilization and culture like one of his friends Jasper Petulengro's snakes; changed his spots as the leopard can never do, and clothed himself in a new individuality. I did not envy him his rounds with the Flaming Tinman, though he did come off victorious, but there was an ineffable charm in the peaceful life in the dingle and in his affectionate relations with the little horse, the sole companion of his solitude, who sympathized silently with his master when sickness struck him down.

ADVERTISE IN THE MORNING STAR

SPIRITS TURPENTINE

—Mr. Stephens Barnes, a well-known citizen of Robeson county, died at his home in the Long Branch neighborhood a few days ago, aged 84 years.

—Tom Starr, a negro, is in jail in Winston-Salem for stealing $125 from his wife's grandfather, Allen Brown, of Mocksville. He was trying to skip the country when arrested.

—Lumberton special, Aug. 24: Mr. R. W. Davis, of Southport, chairman of the Sixth district Republican Congressional Committee, was here yesterday. The convention has been called for next Tuesday at Wrightsville Beach.

—Dunn special, August 24: Friday evening this section was visited by the largest and most damaging rain of the season. Cotton in this section will be about three weeks late. Last year some was sold on this market August 28th. So far none is open yet.

—Messrs. H. M. McAllister and W. H. Bryant, of Lumberton, have bought a naptha launch for Lumber river. It weighs 10,000 pounds and can be made to seat thirty people It is six-horse power. It will be run on the Lumber river, which could be easily made navigable for freight steamers.

—Jesse Hall, colored, of Warrenton, was drowned a few days ago while fording a creek that had been swoolen by heavy rains. He was driver for a livery stable and had driven a pessenger into the country. On returning he drove into the swollen stream and he and the horse were drowned and the buggy wrecked.

—Raleigh News and Observer, Aug. 25: It was stated yesterday authoritatively that the University of North Carolina will very probably require an additional year for the B. L. degree soon, a step which is being taken by a number of other institutions. Wake Forest College has already taken this step.

—Kinston special, Aug. 24: Around the tobacco warehouses today it looked like "old times," when the surrounding country produced a great deal more of the golden weed than they have since the great slump in 1903. The heaviest break so far this season was today's sales and each of the fire warehouses had a very good sale. There was in the neighborhood of 150,000 pounds.

—A colored man by the name of Nathan Robertson was killed near Scott, Warren county, a few days ago. Robertson was beating his way on a freight and while the train was pulling up a grade near Scott he attempted to jump off and go to his home near by, but was struck by a cattle guard and knocked under the moving wheels and so badly mangled that he died in a few hours.

—At Oxford on Wednesday, Mr. T. B. Pendleton, who is looking after Mr. Richard Brown's bicycle shop pulled open a drawer in a table he was sitting by and took out a 32-calibre pistol and examined it. By some means it slipped out of his hands, the hammer striking the table and fired, the ball, striking him in the breast and glanced around the breast bone, coming out near the shoulder. At latest accounts he was doing well.

—Asheville special, Aug. 24: As a result of the vat accident at the Hans Rees Sons' tannery several days ago, when one man lost his life and three others were made dangerously ill, a suit for damages will shortly be instituted in Superior Court against the tannery company by the administrator of Zaney Saxton, the victim that died. A suit for $10,000 will at once be instituted. Gross negligence on the part of the company's servants will be allegel.

—A fatal accident befell John McBride a 12-year-old orphan boy, in Jonesville Tuesday afternoon. He had been hunting and put the gun on the grass. One of his companions, Charles Benge, picked the weapon up and pointed it at him. John told him to put it down that it might be loaded. The boy then snapped it. There was a report and the charge tore a hole through John's left arm near the shoulder, shattering the bone. Physicians were called in and amputated it at the shoulder. The boy died Thursday night.

—Lumberton special, Aug. 24: Most all reports we have of the condition of the cotton crop of the county are very discouraging and the crop as a whole in the county will be short. Some sections of the county have not suffered as much from excessive rains as others but the average for the county is not encouraging. A farmer told me today that he had noticed the cotton carefully between here and Maxton and that he did not believe it would average 200 pounds of lint cotton to the acre. His own crop will yield 2 1-2 bales to 6 acres, he thinks. As to corn the reports are much more encouraging.

—Raliegh correspondence, Aug. 24: About a dozen carpenters, all employed at the Hospital for the Insane, have gone on a strike. Yesterday two carpenters were obtained and are at work. The strike was unfortunate, in that it delayed the important finishing work on the new annex for women. It semes that the contractor is one against whom the carpenters' union has a great deal of feeling. But for the strike the annex would have been finished by this time. It will not be ready until September 15th, it is now stated. The equipments have been shipped and have nearly all arrived. Some have been installed. This was ordered at a special meeting of the council of State, and it was certainty greatly needed.

—Charlotte special, Aug. 24: An interesting rumor was heard on the streets today regarding the plan of the South and Western, now being constructed in the western part of the State. The report comes from a gentleman who was near Shelby this week and who in conversation with several engineers, camped out near that town, learned from them that they were at work on surveys preparatory to double tracking the Seaboard to Mount Holly from a convention point up the Seaboard, bringing the road to within twelve miles of this city. The engineers are further reported as saying that the road would likely go to Spartanburg but the line by Mount Holly would end at a point in South Carolina or on the main line of the Seaboard.

—Durham special, Aug. 24: The order of the mayor that certain immoral and indecent signs be taken from the bill-boards of the city has not been obeyed. Instead of taking down the signs or covering them, the bill poster was busy today putting up other similar advertisements all over the city. The local manager for the Richmond concern that owns the bill-posting right here asked this morning for time in which to hear from his people. This time was granted him and he went to work immediately to put up a great number of the vulgar signs, advertisements which show the form of a woman practically nude with a thin gauze net spread over her. The matter has aroused a great deal of interest and there are many people here who will join a crowd, if this becomes necessary, and destroy every bill-board in the city. A prominent minister of the gospel said today that every virtue-loving man in Durham should and would stand by the mayor and the officers in their fight against this evil.

—Elizabeth City correspondence: M. H. White, the greatest horse racer in North Carolina, is here today. Mr. White states that this has been a most successful season for his horses. His great stallion, Colonel Patrick, has won every race, eight altogether. He was entered in the Central Park, New York circuit, in the Lake Erie circuit. His mare, Hestreller, has entered seven races, won five of them and taken second place, in two; Conroy a stallion, has entered thirteen races, won nine and got second place in four. Colonel Patrick and Hestreller are both trotters; Conroy is a pacer. Mr. White's three year old gelding N. C., who has never appeared on a public track, will in a few days enter the Horse Review Futurity for a $7,000 purse, and will also enter the Lexington Futurity for three year olds for a purse of $22,000. Mr. White has been offered $10,000 for Colonel Patrick, but says he would sacrifice him at that price.

—Tarboro special, Aug. 24.—Several days ago Mrs. Dave L. Swinson, of this place, mysteriously disappeared. Diligent search was made for her with no result. However, yesterday afternoon a colored man found her body floating down Hendrick's creek. This creek is on the west boundary line of this place. There is no doubt but what Mrs. Swinson committed suicide as there was no evidence of foul play. Mrs. Swinson was 45 years of age, and disappeared from home last Monday afternoon. The gravest fears beset the family but they can imagine no reason why she should have taken her own life or why any one should attempt foul play. The fear of self-destruction is strengthened by the fact that a search of the house showed that she left without hat, shoes or stockings.

—Lumberton special, Aug. 24: In the Superior Court Henry Johnson was yesterday evening sentenced to the penitentiary for 30 years at hard labor. Johnson, on the night of June 4th, in Little Washington, had a difficulty with Henry Miller over a pair of pants. Johnson left, came up town, went to the stables of Tom Farrier secured a breechloading shot gun and returned to Litle Washington, where he said he was going to kill Miller. He was joined by his "pal" Dock Isler, and the two made a search for Miller. They overtook him about 25 yards from his home and without a word or a moment's warning Johnson fired and Miller fell dead. Johnson walked over to the Methodist church and threw the gun under the church where it was found. Johnson then made his escape but was captured at Bellfield, Va., where he was at work on his uncle's farm. The charge against Johnson was murder in the first degree, but the jury, who were out only ten minutes, found a verdict of murder in the second degree.

ICE WAGON ORDINANCE.

Scales Will Be on Them After To-day —Weigh Each Block.

Complaints having reached the city authorities that the local ice dealers are not complying with an obsolete ordinance requiring each delivery wagon to be equipped with a pair of scales and that each block of ice be weighed in the presence of the customer when so desired, Chief of Police Williams yesterday notified Manager R. W. Wallace, of the Independent Ice Company, the only factory now doing a retail business in Wilmington, that after Monday the law in this respect would be strictly enforced. Mr. Wallace explained the situation to Chief Williams, but said in view of the complaints that each wagon would be equipped according to law as soon as the hardware stores open to-morrow morning. The ordinance was passed several years ago when there were complaints that the colored drivers gave short weights and were disposed to furnish the block brought into the residence of a patron or no block at all regardless of weight. It seems now that similar complaints are being made and the city officials are asked to require the wagons to be equipped in accordance with the law. Chief Williams and Manager Wallace say the scales will be on the wagons all right Monday morning and that the ice will be weighed when it is requested as is required by the law.

ESCAPE FROM DROWNING.

Young Raleigh Man Knocked Down by Breaker in the Surf.

Mr. N. B. Broughton, Jr., of Raleigh, member of a prominent family in that city, had a narrow escape from drowning in the surf in front of Lumina at Wrightsville Beach yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock. Mr. Broughton came down on the Tabernacle Baptist church excursion from Raleigh yesterday and with a number of his friends were in bathing. The sea was running heavy and young Mr. Broughton, drifting beyond his depth, was knocked over by a huge breaker. He was strangled and lost control of himself as he began to be swept out toward the sea. His shouts for help were heard by Capt. W. P. Monroe, assistant chief of the Wilmington Fire Department, who quickly went to his rescue. The young man was brought in safely with no bad consequences save the shock naturally following the excitement. He was able to leave on the train for his home with the excursion party last night.

POLICE COURT YESTERDAY.

Several Cases of More Than Passing Interest Were Heard.

Several cases of more or less interest were heard in the police court yesterday. One of them was against Mr. Thos. H. Wright, of J. G. Wright & Sons, real estate agent. Mr. Wright was charged with exceeding the speed limit in his automobile Friday night on Market street, the affidavit having been made out by Mounted Policeman C. G. Jones. Mr. Wright explained that he was not mindful of the fact that he was exceeding the speed named in the ordinance and was dismissed.

A white and a colored boy charged with the dangerous practice of jumping on and off street cars at the Front and Princess streets junction, were warned and dismissed.

W. H. Hinds and D. W. Jameson, street employes, were charged with an affray on Second, between Princess and Chesnut streets, Friday evening after they knocked off work, the arrest having been by Officer L. F. Harper, superintendent of carts. Jameson was fined $5 and costs; Hinds was let off with the costs.

In addition to these leading events, the following prize contests will be pulled off in the afternoon, and will be free for all: Standing broad jump, standing high jump, running broad jump, running high jump, 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, sack race, three-legged race and many others contests of a similar nature, all of which and the entries for each and prizes to be awarded will be announced in a later issue.

A union band, composed of Wilmington musicians, will head the parade and about fifty horses and a dozen carriages will take part in this feature.

TINY TOT LOST IN STREET.

Child Wandered From Third and Hanover to Down Town.

Lost in the street and unable to tell her name or from whence she came, a little three-year-old daughter of Mr. Jesse Hardwicke, Third and Hanover streets, wandered from her home late yesterday afternoon and was found subsequently after dark by a young man at Third and Walnut streets. The tot was asked her name and where she lived, but never an intelligent word could the young man receive. Finally, the friend of the little one told her, "Let's go home," thinking the child would instinctively go where she lived, but the little one was all at sea and her lead took the young man all down on the wharf. It seemed an impossible task for the young man and finally Policeman J. R. Sneeden was asked to assist. He advised that the tot be sent to the City Hall and pretty soon there was an inquiry there for the lost child. It was returned promptly to the overjoyed mother, who had searched far and wide for the little truant.

BASEBALL YESTERDAY.

Seventh Street Rattlers Close Champions of League.

Rain seriously interferred with the game of baseball yesterday afternoon at Hilton Park between the Seventh Street Rattlers and the Market Street Giants. On account of the condition of the grounds, it was decided to close the league season with the games already played and to pull off only an exhibition game. The Rattlers won the exhibition by a score of 4 to 3. Sallings and Jewell formed the battery for the Rattlers and Gore and Seifert for the Giants. Only six innings were played. The game was umpired by Mr. Louis Moore and on account of the weather its class was only fair.

Had Pistol Strapped on Leg.

Last night as the excursion train for South Carolina was leaving the Front street station of the A. C. L. Dave Carmichael, a negro, became disorderly and was arrested. He resisted strenuously but was finally brought to time by the officers. In the negro's pockets were a lot of pistol balls but nowhere could the weapon itself be found for some time. Finally as the finishing touches were being put on by the officers engaged in searching his person, one of them encountered a bump on his leg. Investigation proved that the negro had the pistol strapped to his leg. Carmichael will explain the pistol etiquette of South Carolina to the Mayor to-morrow. In addition to the pistol the negro had two knives on his person.

INSURRECTION SITUATION

Spanish, British, German and Other Businessts Want United States to Intervene—Report That Rebels Are Disheartened.

(By Cable to The Morning Star.)

Havana, August 25.—So far as actual developments go, the situation here to-day is unchanged. The eastern provinces are perfectly quiet and no encounters of any consequence have yet taken place in the province of Santa Clara.

The insurrectionary movement there is not growing. The loyalty of the people of Matanzas appears almost as well established as that of the inhabitants of Puerto Principe, which, so far, has been the model province for peacefulness. There has been some skirmishing in the vicinity of Havana and large bands of insurgents are still roaming about the southern part of Havana povince, but thee have been no disturbances in western Havana since the death of General Bandera.

Governor Nunez, of Havana Provinve, infomed the Associated Press to-day that this province will be free from insurgent bands within a fortnight.

The center of interest continues to be in Pinar del Rio, in which province only is there a large and well organized movement against the govenment. Considerable criticism has been aroused b ythe policy of the government in dividing its forces in Pinar del Rio, but the die in this regard is rast, for Colonel Barallao, with a force of artillerymen and recruits, sallied cut of San Juan del Martinez to-day in the expectation of encountering the insurgent forces commanded by Pino Guerra. The fate of the revolution appears to rest largely on the result of the coming engagement between these two forces. The people of Cuba will be relieved to hear some news of a decisive nature either one way from Pinar del Rio. The sympathy of the people of Havana is with the government, but there is no general overwhelming anxiety to see its forces prevail.

Meanwhile business enterprises are at a standstill. The commercial interests, while with President Palma, desire more than anything else, permanently settled conditions.

If the disorders continue for two or three months, Spanish business interests as well as American, British, German and Canadian, would welcome American intervention. The subject, however, is so delicate that it is not much discussed, except in private.

No Interference Contemplated.

Washington, August 25.—The Cuban situation is receiving much attention from State Department officials who are keeping carefully in touch with the developments in the little republic. The department received no dispatches to-day throwing any new light on the situation. Officials believe from the general character of the revolution that it has good financial support and is thoroughly organized.

Insurgents Disheartened.

Havana, August 25.—Vice President Mendez Capote informed the Associated Press this afternoon that the insurgents in the provinces of Pinar del Rio and Havana are beginning to be dissotisfied and are returning to their homes. They expected a dashing coup d'etat, and many of them had already selected positions they hoped to occupy in the government service. They are now changing their views, fearing capture and punishment.

A prominent American who has just returned here from the province of Santa Clara, where he visited several towns, says the people there are excited and erratic as a rule. He does not believe there will be a general insurrection, but he says that the insurrectionary movement under strong leadership might easily become powerful enough to sweep away the Palma government.

It is officially announced that near Santa Rosa, province of Matanzas, this morning 150 rural guards, commanded by Captain Gomez, charged with their machetes and dispersed the rebels under Rainozo, killing seven and wounded one of them.

New York, August 25.—Arms and ammunition for the Cuban government were shipped from this city today for Havana on board the Ward Line steamship Mexico. The steamer had stowed away in her hold 15,000 Remington repeating rifles, 800,000 rounds of ammunition and six Gatling rapid-fire guns for the use of President Palma's forces. The shipment, it was said, would have been larger, but the vessel could carry no more. The steamer Kansas, which will sail next Thursday, will carry 3,000,000 rounds of ammunition and 5,000 Remingtons for the Cuban government.

At the office of M. Hartley Company, the firm which shipped the supplies, it was said that the guns were ordered by cable on Thursday by the head officer of the government arsenal at Havana, at the order of President Palma. It was a rush order and called for immediate shipment.

NEGRO BARBER SHOT TO DEATH

Insulted South Carolinaian's Wife and Husband Fired Both Barrels of Shot Gun Into Him—Slayer Surrendered.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Florence, S. C., August 25.—The Times this afternoon says: "Roy Marshall a young white man living on J. S. McCall's plantation near Effingham, shot and killed Louis Gregg, a negro barber, at Effingham this morning about 8 oclock.

"Mr. Marshall came on to the city and offered to give himself up to the authorities but he was advised to wait until after the inquest which will be held at Effingham today.

"Marshall says this negro Gregg, insulted his wife yesterday afternoon while he was away from the house.

"He declined to talk about the affair, saying he preferred waiting until after the inquest and until he could see and have a conference with his counsel.

"The particulars gathered from a neighbor of Marshall's is that yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock while Marshall was in his field pulling fodder this negro Louis Gregg went to his house and had some improper talk to Mrs. Marshall. He was very impertinent and threatening in his manner. Mrs. Marshall became frightened and screamed and this frighten the negro away.

"Marshall came home shortly afterwards and was told by his wife what had happened. He got his gun and immediately set out in pursuit of the negro, vowing that he would hunt him all night and kill him when he found him.

"This morning about 8 o'clock he came upon Gregg in H. B. McCall's store at Effingham and he emptied both barrels into the negro's body at close range, killing him instantly. He then came on to Florence to give himself up.

"Lewis Gregg had been known by the citizens of Effingham for about six years. He had been going about from place to place, following the occupation of a barber. He is said to be a rather burly, independent talking negro, and was not very popular with whites nor blacks.

"Coroner Cooper and Sheriff Burch left the city about 12 o'clock to conduct the inquest.

DECIDED FOR RAILROADS.

Rates on Lumber from Georgia Not Unreasonable.

Washington, August 25.—In the decision of the Inter-state Commerce Commision rendered by Commissioner Clements in the case of the Farrar Lumber Company against the Southern Railway ompany, upon complaint that the lumber rates from Dalton, Ga., to points in Virginia on the Norfolk and Western lines between Bristol, Tenn., and Roanoke, Va., and between Bluefield, W. Va., and Lynchburg, Va., which were advanced in 1901 and 1903, are unreasonable and unduly discriminating, and also in violation of the long and short haul clauses of the Inter-state Commerce law. The commisison denies reparation because of insufficient proof.

In a similar decision, in the case of the Farrar Lumber Company against the Southern Railway Company and other carriers, the Commission holds that there has been no wrongful discrimination resulting from the existing adjustment of rates.

HIGH FLYERS OUT ON PARADE

Eagles' Procession Greatest Held in Years on Streets of Milwaukee—12,000 Loyal "Birds" Marched In Line.

(Milwaukee (Wis) Journal.)

With 12,000 Eagles in line, the spectacular feature of their convention, the monster parade, began the march through the business district at promptly 1:30 Wednesday. All of the Eagle marching clubs and degree teams appeared in the full uniform, consisting of blue coats and trousers with white hats and canes. Scattered through the long procession were many ludicrous features, gretesque costumes and topical burlesque.

The costuming in the parade was elaborate, each State having adopted some style of uniform representing local industries. So close together were the bands that at times, the airs of three different pieces intermingled in the space of one block. The parade required over an hour to pass any given point.

Hundreds of carriages bedecked in the Eagle colors of red, white and blue and many automobiles found places in the long line. Multicolored parasols, fans and banners were carried by each delegation.

Towards the front of the long procession the Kansas City crowds, bearing aloft huge sun flowers, and headed by an immense figure dressed in a mother hubbard and brandishing a hatchet, had been assigned its position. "Carrie Nation" was greeted with resounding cheers all along the line of march.

Dressed in red shirts, old trousers and disreputable hats, and carrying copper dinner pails the Montana delegation of nearly fifty made a decided impression upon the spectators. The miners' brigade had been selected from the largest men in the State order.

With large placards bearing the words, "You've got to show us,' the Missouri delegation followed in the wake of the Montana miners. The Missourians were led by a portly individual astride a farm mule of about seven teen hands.

A ribbon bedecked automobile headed the Grand Rapids contingent. Upon the prow of the machine perched a local member dressed as Happy Hooligan and throwing kisses to the crowds. From this same machine pennies made from Michigan copper were thrown by the handfuls into the streets.

Boston made a strong bid for the next Eagles convention with an exhibit in the parade. A large ice wagon, covered with signs and carying a man weighing at least 400, was given a position in the line. The portly gentleman carried a large banner upon which was written, "This is what Boston hospitality will do for one."

Marching like veterans, fifty good men and true from Pittsburg, dressed in blue serge suits and wearing gray felt hats, swung into line, forming one of the neatest bodies in the parade. Altoona, Pa., with its marching club dressed in dark green uniforms of military cut, presented a handsome appearance, as did Norfolk, Va., in military uniforms of blue and gray.

One of the most attractive groups in the parade was the small delegation from Spokane, Wash. There were twenty of these Eagles attired in elaborate hussar uniforms of white, red and blue including the shoulder capes of white. Another interesting small company came from Homesead, Pa. They were twelve in number and were dresed in overalls and carried dinner pails in their hands.

Baltimore aerie's famous $1,000 banner was a feature of the parade carried by four little darkies dressed in plantation costume.

The parade was a complete success in every way. It is estimated by the officers at headquarers that more than 5,000 men participated in the demonstration.

Thousands of spectators lined both sides of the streets along the line of march, which ended at Schlitz park where the afternoon exercises are to be held. Windows in the various buildings en route were filled with people, waving flags and cheering each delegation as it passed.

The Norfolk Va, Eagles captured the prize as the most unique walking club in line. Their uniforms being red, white and blue, the colors of the organization. Norfolk also secured the convention for 1907 and one of her popular sons, Mr. W. G. Pettis, was elected Grand Conductor, Mr. William J. Bellamy of Wilmington, N. C., placing his name before the convention in a most patriotic speech.

FINE PROGRESS IN EDUCATION

Record Made By North Carolina in Five Years Compare With Any State in Union—United States Statistics.

Washington, August 25.—The record made by North Carolina during the last five years in educational facilities compares well with that of any State in the Union, as shown by the report of the Commissioner of Education for the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904. The report has just come out and is very interesting.

There were 676,615 children of school age in the State—474,657 white and 221,958 colored. For the education of these children the State was spending $1,287,275.70 annually, exclusive of $161,363 raised by local taxation. The total amount expended for each child in North Carolina, of school age, including local taxes, was $2.17, the average amount in the United States being $9.50. The average monthly salary of teachers was $26.78 for white and $22.19 for colored teachers, and in the United States the average monthly salary was $48. The length of the public school term in North Carolina was 76.15 days; average length in the United States, 145 days.

The average value of the schoolhouses in the State was for white, $231.43, colored, $136; 830 districts were without schoolhouses of any kind; 829 had log houses. In different counties of the State schools were closed during the winter on account of the buildings not being habitable.

Attention is called to the fact that a great hindrance to effective education in a State so large and sparsely populated as North Carolina is the multiplication of district schools to satisfy special families. Nearly one-half of the white school districts in the State and 44 per cent. of the colored districts contain less than 65 children of school age. Another noticeable fact in connection with the report of the Commissioner is that 82 per cent. of tht entire population is rural and agricultural, and that illiteracy among both the white and colored race is decidedly on the decrease.

The enrollment in schools for the United States for the year 1903-'04 reached a total of 17,896,890, being an increase of 357,422 over the previous year. Of the total amount expended for all purposes ($691,000,000), nearly two-fifths, or 39.5 per cent. was paid for common schools. It will be seen that the Federal, State and local expenditures for education for the year 1903-'4 amounted to almost one-half the cost of the national government.

Durham led North Carolina in the number of children attending school. With a population of 6,679 she had 2,713 children in school; Asheville, population 16,478, had 2,637 children in school; Charlotte (figures showing number of children attending school are not given); Concord, population 7,910, number of children in school 2,713; Greensboro, population 12,793, number of children in school 2,260; Newbern, population 9,090, number of children in school 2,567; Wilmington, population 21,344, number in school not given; Winston, population 10,804, number of children in school 1,735.

To run her schools during the year Asheville received from the State $66, from the city $20,186, from the county and other taxes $10,948, a total of $32,335 as against a total of $9,600 for Concord; $37,494 for Durham; $23,600 for Greensboro; $9,316 for Newbern; $26,455 for Raleigh, and $17,500 for Winston, no figures being given for Charlotte. It will thus be seen that Durham received more than any city in the State, and that Asheville came next with Raleigh following.

While Durham received more for her schools, Concord expended more, being followed by Durham, Raleigh and Asheville in the order named, these expenditures being for permanent investments, teaching and incidental expenses. The figures for the different places were as follows: Asheville, $30,186; Charlotte, no figures given; Concord $39,750; Durham $32,500; Greensboro $23,000; Newbern $8,954; Raleigh $30,342, and Winston $17,310.

Among the higher institutions of learning reported closed recently is the North Carolina College, at Mt. Pleasant.

The total value of property possessed by institutions of higher learning in the United States is $464,216,545, a gain of almost $33,000,000 over the amount for the preceding year. This is an instance of the growth of colleges throughout the United States.

Trinity College, at Durham, is the only institution in the State that reported gifts amounting to over $100,000 for the year, the amount received by it being $106,000. The total value of all gifts reported by the several universities receiving donations amounted in the year to a total of over $9,000,000.

My Only Friend

[Original.]

There seems to be a consensus of opinion that the dog is nearer, so far as affection counts, to man than any other animal. For me, I consider him the most intelligent of all four footed beasts, but perhaps I am prejudiced in this opinion, for I once owned a dog that I loved better than I ever loved man or woman. He was the only companion I valued while confined within the narrow limits of a ship, often for years on one voyage. I have always been prone to shut myself up within myself and as master could never bring myself to associate on familiar terms with any of my subordinates. I found Rex on a wreck when I was mate of a vessel. He was about to die of starvation, and I took him off and fed him with my own hands. He was of the collie breed—the larger kind. I have saved men and women and children from wrecks, but never saw such gratitude expressed in a look as the starving dog gave me. Ravenous for food, he seemed to know when I gave it to him sparingly that I was doing so for his own good and acquiesced as a little child will submit to similar treatment from its parents.

As he recovered and filled out he was a princely animal, and I named him Rex. For years through storm and sunshine Rex and I walked the quarter deck side by side and when we turned in at night turned in together, often in the same bunk. When on a dangerous coast or in bad weather I left my cabin to go on deck Rex would insist on going with me and if I shut him in the cabin would whine pitifully till he was permitted to join me. Then at my side he would endure rain or sleet driven against him by a furious wind. I tried at first to induce him to remain in a coil of rope over which I drew a tarpaulin, but he scorned it, seeming to consider my place of duty his place of duty.

We classify living beings, but no classification can be perfect. Men have been succored and have murdered their preservers, and yet we regard them as living souls, while we class my Rex as a brute. He may have been a brute to others; to me he was only behind me in physical development. If I have a soul he had one, for I saw it in his eye, as he saw one in mine. Be this as it may, he was all that I loved.

One night I went to my cabin and sank at once to sleep. I should have been on deck, but was worn out with constant watching on a treacherous coast in thick weather. I dreamed that we were sailing up on a broad beach, and I could hear the sand grinding under the keel. I heard a sharp bark in my ear and, awakening, saw by the light of dawn Rex, his fore paws on the bunk, whining and telling me with his expressive eyes that something terrible had happened. Getting on deck, I found that the ship had struck a submerged rock and was fast sinking. The men, mindful of their own lives, had got out the boats and filled them, and the last boat was about to pull away, not a man in it daring to wake his captain for fear he would be left behind. Seeing me coming, shame stopped them.

"Get aboard, captain!" they shouted.

"Is every living thing off the ship?" I asked.

They assured me that all had left except Rex and myself. Those in the bow at which I must enter made room for me, and I got in, then turned to help Rex in. The boat was overloaded, and the men were anxious to be off, fearing to get caught in the vortex that would follow the ship when she went down, and the moment I was in they gave way. Rex plunged into the water and swam beside the boat. I wished to take him in, but the men protested against taking a dog into a boat already too heavily burdened.

We were not in sight of land, and I knew that my Rex, who of all the living creatures aboard the ship had thought of me in the great peril and but for whom I should have been left to perish, could not swim to safety. I proposed to the men that if they would give my place to the dog I would look for some floating object to which I could cling, but to which the dog could not. But all protested against having the dog in the boat lest he prove uncontrollable with me out of it. I saw the difficulty myself and gave up the plan.

Rex swam directly behind us, never taking his eye from me for a moment. He was fast getting tired, but gave no sign that he wished to be taken aboard. With his intelligence I have always believed that he took in the situation and was resigned to it. I read this in his wistful eye and that his regret at parting with me overcame his dread of death. After awhile, when the men ceased pulling for a rest and consultation, Rex swam up beside the boat. The men in trying to drive him away endangered our equilibrium. All protested, and one with a revolver threatened to shoot him.

I have given many heartrending orders, but none that was so hard for me as the one I now felt necessary. Standing up and looking my dog in the eye, I said mournfully:

"Back, Rex!"

Human beings have bidden the long farewell to loved ones left behind with eyes when the tongue has lost its power. Such a farewell my Rex gave me, then turned and swam back toward where the ship had gone down. I watched him till he was a mere speck; then a wave larger than the others rolled over him.

"DOG DAYS" AMONG WASHINGTON OFFICIALS

Of All the Departments, Only Interstate Commerce Commission is Working Full Force—New Rate Law Entails Much Correspondence

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—In these "dog days" few of the departments of the government are doing more than routine work. It is vacation time and hundreds of officials and clerks are away from Washington on their annual leave. Those who are here are doing, in this oppressively hot weather, little more than they have to do.

Not so, however, with the employes of the interstate commerce commission. Measured by number of officials and clerks, the commission is one of smallest departments of the executive branch of the government. Less than two hundred are employed in the commission's work; but just now they are not only the busiest people in the national capital, but the work they are doing is highly important to the people of the country.

The new railroad rate law, which will become effective on the 28th instant, is occupying practically the entire attention of the officials and clerical force of the commisison. The radical changes in the law involve an enormous amount of work. Every phase of the law is being taken up by the railroads and steamship lines of the country with the interstate commerce commission, the great bulk of the work being done by correspondence. The consequence is that one day's mail of the commission is as large as that of any other department of four times its size.

Secretary Edward A. Moseley, of the commission, said to-day that he had found it necessary, in order to keep abreast of the current work, to do much work outside of the ordinary office hours. Some of the other officials and clerks also have done and are doing extra work.

"Our work has increased so greatly within the past month," said secretary Moseley, "that we shall be compelled, if the increase should continue, materially to enlarge our force. The pressure is too great for our present force. Only yesterday we received 600 letters which had to be answered immediately, besides other mail packages. We sent out 9,144 pieces of mail, a very large portion of which had to be dictated, typewritten, signed and addressed. Some of the outgoing mail, of course, consisted of circular letters and printed matter but every piece of it had to be addressed and sealed. In weight the day's mail aggregated 1,140 pounds—more than half a ton—and the greater part of it was first class matter.

"Under a new ruling of the postoffice department all departments of the government now are obliged to weigh mail before delivering it to the postoffice. In this way we know officially every day just what amount of mail we are handling. In my entire experience I never have known the mail of the interstate commerce commission to be so heavy as it has been in the past month. To a great extent this is due to the new rate law, but the recent and pending investigations made by the commission have contributed their full share to the tremendous work.

"The investigations conducted by the commisison into the coal and oil business by direction of Congress under the Tillman-Gillespie resolution already has amounted, in printed form, to twelve large volumes of more than one thousand pages each, and the investigation is not completed. The testimony alone probably will fill several additional volumes. That work, with the report and a digest of the testimony, must be ready for Congress when it shall convene in December. Trust 'busting' makes good matter for newspapers, but it involves an amount of labor that is scarcely appreciated by the American people."

INDUSTRIES SOUTH

Activity in Manufacture of Artificial Ice—Electric Light and Power Plants Building—Other Material Improvements.

Baltimore, Md., August 25.—Increasing stringency in the ice situation, especially in parts of the country where nature has been depended upon for the main supply, directs attention to the rapid increase in the number of ice-making establishments or cold storage plants in the South where the natural supply has always been comparatively short. A typical undertaking is the closing of a contract by a concern at Selma, Ala., for $50,000 worth of new machinery and buildings to supersede an old plant which has been found to be unable to meet the demands upon it. The new plant will have a capacity of 60 tons a day, and, in conjunction with it, will be an up-to-date cold storage department equipped throughout with the latest methods of refrigerating. Similar undertakings announced in this week's issue of the Manufacturers' Record are the doubling of a plant at Monroe, La., making the output 200 tons a day, the installation of machinery with a daily capacity of 10 tons at Monticello, Fla., the establishment of a 25-ton plant at Harrisonburg, Va., one at Oakland Mills, Md., and one at Annapolis, Md., cold storage plants at Durham, N. C., and at Wilmington, N. C., and a combination of ice manufacture and cold storage at Keystone, W. Va. At Williamson, W. Va., a $100,000 company has been organized for an ice plant, cold storage facilities and electric lighting and another of the same character at Mineral Wells, Tex.

Electric light plants, either as individual enterprises or under municipal auspices more or less, are also planned for Anniston, Ala., Mobile, Ala., Talbotton, Ga., Covington, Ky., Watertown, Tenn., Coal Creek, Tenn., Petros, Tenn., Union City, Tenn., Terrell, Tex., Munday, Ter., Fayetteville, W. Va., and Kingwood, W. Va. These are illustrations of the wide-spread movement in the South for giving towns and cities up-to-date conveniences and facilities. The development of electricity for power goes on apace, the announcements of the week including new plants or additions at Andalusia, Ala., Greenville, Ala., Anniston, Ala., Baltimore, Md., Louisville, Ky., Charleston, S. C., and Jackson, Tenn.

Diversification of sources of power in the South comes with diversification of industries there typed by plans for the manufacture of concrete building materials at Meridian, Miss., of steel ranges, furnaces, etc., at Sheffield, Ala., of sawed boxes at Memphis, Tenn., of glass at Sisterville, W. Va., of brick at Chattanooga, Tenn., of twin engines, sugar mills, steel castings, etc., at Birmingham, Ala., of street cars at High Point, N. C., of wagons at Hopkinsville, Ky., of sashes, doors and blinds at New Orleans, La., of fertilizer at Charleston, S. C., of shirt waists at South Norfolk, Va., of paper boxes at Columbus, Ga., of essential oils at Louisville, Ky., of iron pipes at Chattanooga, Tenn., of tobacco at Richmond, Va., of spokes at Jonesboro, Ark., and of lime at San Antonio, Tex. With these should be mentioned lead and zinc mining at Black Rock, Ark., railway machine shops at Jacksonville, Fla., gravel and sand dredging at Rome, Ga., gold mining at Dahlonega, Ga., phosphate mining at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., marble works at Beaumont, Tex., preserving plant at Dallas, Tex., coal mining at Big Stone Gap, Va., wood-working at Johnson City, Tenn., packing plant at Nacogdoches, Tex., garbage reduction plant at Little Rock, Ark., abattoir at Atlanta, Ga., and granite crushing plant at Faith, N. C.

The Strawberry Bed.

How to manage the strawberry bed after fruiting is somewhat of a perplexing question for growers as well as for the amateur. There is also a difference of opinion as the best methods and treatment of such beds. During an experience of twenty-five years I have tried almost every way that is now practiced by different growers, and I am well convinced for my own practical use, considering labor and expense, the best method is for me to plant a new bed every year. After the first bearing year, as soon as we are through picking, I begin to take care of the beds by pulling up weeds and grass before they make any seed. Let these lie on the beds in spots where there are no plants. As soon as the ground is frozen I cover the entire bed with horse manure to a depth of two or three inches. This will perhaps smother some of the plants, but there will be plenty of them left for the next year's fruiting, and those that come through in the spring will grow with as much vigor as a newly-set plant. From a bed of one acre treated as above described I picked more berries the past season than from an acre planted one year ago. The berries, however, were not quite as large. After I finish picking a second crop, I plow everything under in July and plant to celery. The land will then be in a high state of fertility, for the strawberry takes but little from the soil. If a second crop is not wanted, the ground should be sown with crimson clover about the first of August. This should be plowed under the following spring, when the ground will be in excellent condition for planting early potatoes, beets, cabbage, or, in fact, any early vegetable. This method of growing strawberries gives me three beds to look after, two bearing beds, one and two years old, and a newly-planted one every spring, and I am of the opinion that there is less labor and expense in planting a bed every year than in trying to build up the old one year after year. Those who have not ground enough for rotation, and wish to retain the old bed, I would advise to narrow down to rows to six or eight inches in width. Where the horse and plow cannot be used it can be easily accomplished with the spade. Broadcast some well-rotted stable manure or fertilizer on the ground and rake it level. New runners will soon occupy the whole space, thus renewing the plantation. Guard against weeds and grass to the end of the season. Mulch with horse manure when the ground freezes. In the spring when the young plants start to growing, dig under the old row or plants that have been used for renewing the bed, for these will be pretty well exhausted. This narrow space, dug under, serves as a path between the renewed rows. Where the mulching or manure lies too heavily on the plants, this should be raked off and left in the paths. This will keep the ground moist, and will be useful in the season of fruiting.—T. M. White, in Rural New York.

UMBRELLAS.

The Various Processes Which Enter Into Their Making.

The ribs and stems of an umbrella are generally made in factories having a specialty of these items and are sent thence to the real manufacturer. Here first the man whose work it is to assemble the parts inserts a bit of wire into the small holes at the end of the ribs, draws them together about the main rod and puts on the ferrule.

In cutting the cloth seventy-five thicknesses or thereabouts are arranged upon a splitting table, at which skilled operators work. In another room are a number of girls who operate hemming machines. A thousand yards of hemmed goods is but a day's work for one of these girls. The machines at which they work are geared to a high speed.

After hemming, the cloth is cut into triangular pieces with a knife, as before, but with a pattern laid upon the cloth. The next operation is the sewing of the triangular pieces together by machinery.

The covers and the frames are now ready to be brought together. In all there are twenty-one places where the cover is to be attached to the frame in the average umbrella.

The handle is next glued on, and the umbrella is ready for pressing and inspection. By far the greater number of umbrellas today are equipped with wooden handles. A large variety of materials may be used, however, such as horn, china, bone, agate, pearl, ivory, silver and gold. Gold and silver, quite naturally, enter into the construction of the more expensive grades of umbrellas, some of which, in price, have been known to bring as high as $150 or $200. A wooden handle may likewise be expensive, depending upon the quality of the wood used. Ebony, petrified wood, fir, oak and elder are as well known to the umbrella men, who manufacture 15,000,000 umbrellas a year.

The umbrella has been developing rapidly during the last few years.

We pick up even a cheap one nowadays, press a button and the top spreads itself like an eagle ready for its flight. We are going away, and an ordinary umbrella is too long to put in our grip. We find among our assortment of umbrellas and parasols one which is meant for just such an emergency and which in a most accommodating manner folds up to suit the size of our traveling bag. Other new ones lock with a key. Some spread their shade over eight or nine feet of territory, and manufacturers aver that these are but a few of the improvements which we may expect.—American Inventor.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Of all the words in the English language "don't tell" are paid the least attention.

The only trouble with experience as a teacher is that the knowledge she gives comes too late.

The trouble with the average father being prepared for a rainy day is that his daughter's wedding day gets him first.

Don't cultivate that habit of looking for something to worry about. You may some day have your search rewarded.

Sometimes people complain of their individuality being crushed out when it would really be the best thing that could happen to them.

Gratitude is a strange thing. You never find it where it should be found, but in cases where there is seemingly little or nothing to be grateful for it abounds.—Atchison Globe.

Mushrooms.

An enthusiast on the subject of mushrooms says there is no more reason to mistake a good mushroom for a poisonous toadstool than to confound nightshade with huckleberries. The distinctions are clear and simple and easily learned. Real mushrooms are known by their beautiful pink gills, not reaching the stem, which stem carries a well marked white woolly ring; by the very fleshy down covered top, the delicious and enticing fragrance, the firm, white flesh, sometimes inclined to pink when cut or broken. One or two rules in regard to gathering mushrooms, we are told, will remove all the peril from the pursuit of them. Examine carefully every specimen you gather. If at all doubtful, throw it away. Show it to somebody that knows. Never cook mushrooms unless you know they are gathered by somebody that knows.

LOOSE TEETH.

Sometimes They Are the Result of Nervous Troubles.

He was an honest dentist, and no one could have accused him of tinkering with a sound molar unless it actually needed attention. When the handsomely gowned woman patient came to him and complained that her teeth were getting loose and she was afraid she would lose them he gave her some good advice and charged her nothing, although it was worth a good stiff fee.

"There is nothing in the world the matter with your teeth," he said. "Each one is as sound as a new dollar. But you should consult a nerve specialist. Evidently you have been worrying a great deal lately."

The woman confessed that she had. Her sister had been very ill, and she had been compelled to help nurse her.

"Quit it unless you wish to lose your teeth," commanded the dentist. "Also you should put yourself under the care of a physician. In some nervous diseases the outward symptom is a shrinking of the gums. This is not an unfailing sign, however. Some persons lose their teeth through a shriveling of the gums on account of an excess of uric acid in the system. If they drank plenty of water the trouble would disappear. I have had several patients whom I have cured simply by getting them to drink plenty of water.

"The gums are pretty good indicators of the general health. Persons whose gums bleed frequently think there is something the matter with their teeth. The trouble is constitutional instead of local. A good tonic would put them on their feet, and this, accompanied by plenty of exercise in the open air, would stop the bleeding of the gums."—New York Press.

An Egyptian Delicacy.

Every country has its own little delicacies, and Egypt is famous for its kabobs. The kabob is broiled meat, but is broiled in so ridiculous a fashion as to be really funny. The peddler uses a little charcoal furnace, something like that in use by our plumbers. In it he keeps up a small but hot fire. Attached to the side of the furnace are a lot of iron skewers. When a customer approaches, the hawker takes a small piece of meat, mutton or goat, the latter being the most popular, cuts it with a sharp knife into a long ribbon, winds it around the skewer and places it upon the charcoal fire. Some of the drippings are collected and, with a little salt and spice, make a pleasant sauce for the kabob when it is done.

A Ghost Story.

A London daily tells a short modern ghost story. A man was traveling on a northbound train out of London. Opposite him was a silent stranger, his only companion. Between London and Derby no word passed. Then, as the train drew out of Derby, he said pleasantly, "Good line, this, sir, eh?" The stranger replied, "I think it's a beastly bad line. I was killed on it two years ago."

Business Methods.

"May I ask if I am in the market for a bid for your affections?" asked the youth who did everything in a businesslike way.

"You must go to par before I can take any stock in your offer," answered the dutiful broker's daughter.

HOME OF THE KEELEY CURE, Greensboro, N. C.

For Liquor and Drug Addictions, the Tobacco Habit and Neurasthenia.

What One of Our Neighbors Says of Us.

A reporter for the News and Observer asked an expression from Rev. Henry W. Battle, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church of Greensboro, and one of the leading divines in the South, as to what re conceived to be the merits of the Keeley Institute, located quite near his home at Greensboro. Dr. Battle said:

"I have been for years a deeply interested observer of the results of the Keeley Treatment for inebriates. My inquiries and observations have lead me to the belief that it is a real (and, therefore, an inestimable) blessing to hundreds of those who resort to it. It is based, I believe, on the generally accepted theory that, 'though beginning in voluntary transgression, the drinker of alcoholic liquors ends in a diseased state which directly attacks and ultimately destroys the will power. Now the medication of Keeley claims to eliminate the disease—it is simply a problem in therapeutics—and this, I am convinced it does. Many a poor wretch in this condition, as in other instances of perverted and vitiated appetite, comes to a realization of his awful danger after the Nemesis of Outraged Natural Law has bound him hand and foot and he is helpless; the Keeley Treatment exercises this Nemesis and makes it easy for him to reform IF HE WANTS TO. The Scriptures tell us that the washed hog will return to his wallowing in the mire—it is because HE IS A HOG; the cured Keeleyite can stay cured if he is a MAN—I know many of them.

"I may add, the Beautiful Keeley Institute is just across the street from my residence; its charming grounds and rare orderliness make it a most desirable neighbor. I feel that my little children are perfectly safe while playing on the lovely lawn, or receiving the caresses of some poor unfortunate who, maybe, is thinking about his own little darling at home. God gave him strength to conquer, and God bless the man, or the institution, say I that holds out a strong helping hand to the sinking ones—ONE SAVED IS WORTH ALL THAT KEELEY COST."

Testimony of a Graduate.

The Keeley Institute Burlington, N. C., August 4, 1906

Greensboro, N. C.

Gentlemen:—It has been nearly twelve years since I availed myself of the Keeley treatment at your Institute for the whiskey addiction. I feel that I want to write and say to you that since that time my health has been better than it ever was before and I shall never forget the kindness shown me while I was there. I wish I could say something to induce every drinking man to go to your Institute and take the treatment. I shall never forget how your physician relieved those poor morphine patients; they all came there without hope and went away so happy.

I understand that your Keeley Institute is now the most beautiful place in North Carolina. I am coming up to see you before very long. I wish I could visit you all oftener, as I always enjoy the trip so much.

If any one ever doubts the efficacy of your cure, if you will tell him to write to me I will take great pleasure in telling him what it has done for me; for I consider that I have accomplished a great deal whenever I can be the means of sending either a drug or whiskey habitue to your institute.

I am very glad to hear from people who go to your Institute that you have a large crowd there all the time.

Let me hear from you as often as you can.

With my best wishes for all of the people under your care, I am,

Sincerely and truly your friend,

R. Q. HAILEY.

APPEARING OLD

Acts as a Bar to Profitable Employment.

You cannot afford to grow old.

In these days of strenuous competition it is necessary to maintain, as long as possible ones youthful appearance.

It is impossible to do this without retaining a luxurious growth of hair.

The presence of Dandruff indicates the presence of a burrowing germ which lives and thrives on the roots of the hair until it causes total baldness.

Newbro's Herpicide is the only known destroyer of this pest, and it is as effective as it is delightful to use

Herpicide makes an elegant hair dressing as well as Dandruff cure.

Accept no substitute—there is none.

A Daring Smuggler

[Original.]

When Captain General Tacon assumed the government of Cuba he found the revenue laws everywhere annulled. The smugglers were organized by one Marti, who was a sort of king among them. He was a tall, dark man, with Spanish, creole and mulatto blood in his veins, possessing great physical strength, courage, shrewdness and business tact.

The captain general endeavored to hunt down the smugglers, but they always eluded him. Then he offered a large reward to any one of them who would desert his comrades and pilot the government ships to their lairs. A double reward was offered for Marti, dead or alive. This plan also failed. Either honor among thieves or a fear of punishment by their fellows prevented any betrayal. Four months passed and no one came forward to give the information and claim the reward.

One dark night two sentinels were pacing back and forth before the captain general's palace in Havana. The Plaza d'Armas, on which the palace stands, was deserted. Just before the clock struck 12 a tall figure wrapped in a military cloak stood watching the sentries from behind the statue of Ferdinand. They met at the entrance, then walked away from each other, turning again at the end of their beats. The watcher was evidently waiting for an opportunity to dart between them when their backs were turned and just before they faced about. At last he put his design into practice and, with lightning speed, passed the portal.

Mounting the staircase, assuming the bearing of one who belonged there, he returned the salute of a sentinel standing near the captain general's door and entered. Tacon sat alone at a large table writing. He looked up at the intruder and asked sternly who he was that thus entered unannounced.

"One who has important information to impart to the government."

"How did you pass the guard?"

"That was not difficult."

"What is your business with me?"

"You have offered a reward for information concerning the smugglers."

"Ah! That is your business?"

"You have offered a pardon to him who will guide your ships to the smugglers' hiding places."

"I have."

"And a special reward for the capture of their leader, Marti."

"Yes."

"I have come to give you the information you desire."

"Well, I am ready to hear it."

"First, have I your word that you will give me a free pardon?"

"I will."

"But my crimes in the eye of the law are great. Do you still promise?"

"If you perform your part, I will perform mine."

"Even if I am a leader among the contrabandists?"

"Yes," said Tacon after a moment's thought; "even if you are a leader."

"Excellency, I know that you are a man of honor. Had I not felt perfect confidence in your word I should not have ventured to thus come here."

"You can trust me."

"Well, then, I will not further delay. The man for whom you have offered the double reward is here."

"You are"—

"Captain Marti."

At the mention of this dreaded name Tacon cast his eyes upon a brace of pistols lying on his desk. Marti drew a pair of similar weapons and, stepping forward, laid them on the desk.

"I have no further use for these," he said.

"Very well," said the governor, "I will keep my word, but for the present you must remain under guard."

"I am willing, your excellency."

The next day a Spanish warship of light draft steamed out of the harbor. Marti was on board to pilot the government officers to the rendezvous of the smugglers. But the smugglers were already warned. Not one of them was captured. Nevertheless, the contrabandist organization was broken up, which was, after all, the main object. Marti returned in the ship and was summoned before the governor, who said to him:

"Since you have performed your part of the agreement I will perform mine. Here is a pardon for all past offenses. And here is an order on the treasurer for"—

"The reward I do not claim," said the ex-smuggler, putting up his hand deprecatingly.

"What do you mean?" asked the astonished governor.

"I will make you a proposition. The treasury is poor, while I am rich. In place of the reward give me the exclusive right to fish on the coast of Cuba. I will at my own expense build a market which shall be a credit to the city of Havana and which at the end of twenty-five years shall revert to the government."

The governor took time to consider the proposition and finally accepted it.

Marti at once entered upon the working of his privilege. Sending for his old associates, he employed them all, and they made more money under the law than they had made while constantly taking great risks, besides being paid for any losses they sustained while Marti was leading the government to their haunts. Marti knew where the best fish were to be caught and supplied the city of Havana well and with great profit to himself. He built the market, as he had agreed, and at the expiration of twenty-five years it reverted to the government.

Marti, who grew very rich, obtained special theatrical privileges in Havana and built the Tacon theater.

NEGRO TROOPS ORDERED AWAY

Feeling at Brownsville, Texas, Such that President Roosevelt Took Action.

ALL RIOTERS WILL BE HELD

They Will Be Turned Over To Texas Authrities if Needed For Trial—Arrest By Rangers Not Confirmed.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Houston, Texas, August 25.—A special from Austin Texas, says:

"An entirely new phase developed today in the Brownsville situation relative to the sending of the negro troops from Fort Brown. Yesterday it appeared to be the intention of the government to hold the negro troops at Brownsville as witnesses against the negro soldiers who were arrested on bench warrants while today, by direction of the President of the United States the negro troops are to be removed to Fort Sam Houston and kept there subject to the civil authorities at Brownsville."

Governor Lanham today received the following telegram from Brigadier General McCaskey, commanding the Department of Texas, regarding the latest move on the part of the Federal government.

"San Antonio, Texas, August 23.—Reference to your telegram this morning. Soldiers held on civil warrants at Fort Brown to be transferred to Fort Sam Houston by order of the President of the United States. The President further directs that the soldiers shall not be removed from the jurisdiction of the State of Texas."

It is now believed that the destination of the three companies from the 26th infantry, which left here last night is Fort Brown where these companies will likely acompany the negro troopers back to Fort Sam Houston.

Negroes Sent Away.

Washington, August 25.—A dispatch was received at the War Department from Major Penrose, commanding the battalion of negro troops of the 25th Infantry which has been stationed at Fort Brown, Texas, anouncing that his command left Brownsville for Fort Reno, at 6:30 o'clock this morning. Major Penrose makes no mention in his dispatch of a number of his troopers said to have been arrested by Texas Rangers in connection with the recent disturbances at Brownsville.

CHILE'S EARTHQUAKE DISASTER.

Towns Destroyed Number 140—President Acts Promptly for Relief.

(By Cable to The Morning Star.)

Santiago, Chile, August 25.—Railroad communication between here and Valparaiso was established to-day.

President Riesco, accompanied by the Minister of Justice, left here today for Valparaiso. He has appointed a general relief committee, which shall have charge of the distributing of all contributions received. The government has bought 50,000 sacks of flour to be distributed among the people who suffered in the catastrophe, and several trains carrying fresh provisions left here to-day for Valparaiso. The towns, villages and hamlets destroyed in the Terremoto district number 140.

President Riesco has appointed an astronomical committee to study the recent seismic disturbances. According to the latest news the earth shocks were left in all the southern provinces of Chile, but they caused no damage.

The authorities of Santiago have resolved to put down robbery and pillage with the same energy that has been employed in Valparaiso.

Up to the present time 3,000 persons have arrived here from Valparaiso.

SURRENDERED TO LYNCHERS.

Sheriff of Dorchester County, S. C., to Be Indicted.

Columbia, S. C., August 25.—Acting upon testimony adduced at the coroners inquest into the death of Willie Spain, the negro who was lynched at St. George on Thursday, last, Governor Heyward to-day ordered the indictment and prosecution of Sheriff Limehouse, of Dorchester county. It is charged that the officials surrendered the negro into the hands of a mob without proper authority or any effort to give protection. The sheriff admits that the surrendered the negro to the mob for the purpose in "investigation' The law provides that in such cases, upon conviction, the sheriff shall be ineligible to hold any office of trust or profit in the State.

Papers found on the person of a stranger who hanged himself yesterday by the roadside near Snowville, Va., indicate that he was Anton Casehore, 915 North Hutchinson street, Philadelphia, that he was an Austrian, who had come to this country recently, and that he was in the employ of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. He was about forty-five years old. No cause for the suicide is known.

FRIGHTFUL RESULT OF TERRORIST'S BOMB

Twenty-eight Persons Killed and Twenty-four Wounded in Attempt to Assassinate Russian Premier—His Daughter Among Dead.

(By Cable to The Morning Star.)

St. Petersburg, August 25.—Twenty-eight persons are dead and twenty-four wounded as the result of a dastardly attempt this afternoon to assassinate Premier Stolypin with a bomb while he was holding a public reception at his country house on Aptekarsky Island. The Premier was slightly wounded on the face and neck by flying splinters.

Among the dead are the Premier's fifteen-year-old daughter, who had both legs broken by the explosion and subsequently succumbed to her injuries; General Zameatin, the Premier's personal secretary; M. Khovostoff, former governor of the province of Penza; Colonel Federoff, chief of the Premier's personal guard; Court Chamberlain Davidoff, Court Chamberlain Voronin and Aide Doubassoff, and four women and two children.

The wounded include M. Stolypin's three-year-old son, who is seriously though not fatally injured, and a number of persons prominent in the social and official world. The man who threw the bomb was among the killed.

According to the official account of the attempt on M. Stolypin's life it appears that at 4 o'clock this afternoon a carriage containing four persons, two dressed in civilian clothes and two in foreign military uniforms, drew up at his villa. The men entered the ante-chamber, one of them holding his helmet in his hand as though concealing a bomb, which accidentally fell in the ante-chamber with the terrible results already detailed. General Zameatin and M. Davidoff, a court chamberlain, were instantly killed and M. Voronin, a court chamberlain, who was attending the Premier's official reception was decapitated while all the other persons in the ante-chamber, including the three men accompanying the individual who carried the bomb, were killed.

The legs of M. Stolypin's daughter, the official account adds, were so severely injured that they had to be amputated and death ensued. His son had a leg broken. Prince Shachowskoi, who was in an apartment adjoining the ante-chamber, was injured. The coachman of the carriage which brought the terrorists to the villa was killed and the vehicle was destroyed, but the horses were not much injured. M. Khovostoff, former governor of the province of Penza, was among those killed.

The fact that two of the assassins were disguised as gendarmes doubtless was due to an effort on their part to make it appear that they were escorting a political prisoner, the third man of the group being attired in the clothes of a civilian.

The police authorities this evening declared that the assassins carried portfolios, which it is believed contained bombs.

The whole of the centre of the house was blown out.

The correspondent of the Associated Press later visited the scene of the explosion and obtained from one of the Premier's Secretary from a sergeant of police and from some of the survivors the following account of the event:

The police sergeant who was standing at corner of the house about twenty yards from the entrance, noticed a landau, drawn by a good pair of horses, roll up the carriage way and stop in front of the door. The three occupants of the carriage, one of whom wore the uniform of an officer of gendarmes and the other being in livery of functionaries of the ministry of the interior, and who were ostentatiously laughing and chatting as they approached the house, descended from the carriage, one of them carying an article about a foot high, resembling a gilded vase.

They ascended the steps, passing directly in front of the policemen at the door and had scarcely disappeared inside the house when a thunderous explosion was heard. The explosion which was louder than the report of a cannon, tore out a large section of the front wall of the villa, demolishing the partition walls inside and brought the upper story down in clouds of mortar and splintered wood. When the dust had cleared away slightly the sergeant saw the mangled bodies of the porter, a policeman and the three revolutionists on the ground in front of the door. The landau which had been stopped directly in front of the entrance was lying on the drive way a mass of twisted and shattered wood and iron. About fifty yards from the door was the driver, who, it is thought, was also a revolutionist and who had been killed on the spot. The horses were wounded, but only in their hind legs, showing that they were partly protected from the force of the explosion by the walls of the villa.

At the moment of the explosion a large reception room at the left of the ante room was filled with a great concourse of officials and visitors as today was the Premier's reception day.

M. Stolypin himself was in the reception room talking to his visitors. In his office which was still further to the left, were three of his secretaries and a footman. The violence of the explosion was such that it tore out the wall between the reception room and the Premier's office in addition to doing the other damage mentioned, killing one of the secretaries and the footman and wounding another secretary. It was from the latter that the correspondent of the Associated Press obtained these details. The fourth man who was in the office escaped uninjured. Every one in the villa and its vicinity was thrown to the ground by the shock.

After the explosion of the bomb a few moments of stupefaction followed among the uninjured survivors and persons in the neighborhood, including a number of soldiers from a grenadier regiment, who rushed to the spot and commenced to carry away the dead and wounded from the villa which had caught fire as a result of the explosion of the bomb.

For over an hour after the explosion there was a scene of greatest confusion at the villa. A great concourse of spectators gathered there, handling horrible remnants of the tragedy and carrying some of them away as souvenirs. The police apparently had lost their presence of mind, for they did litle or nothing until the arrival of M. Makaroff, the Assistant Minister of the Interior, under whose orders the villa and the grounds were cleared and an investigation of the tragedy begun.

Acording to statements of the survivors none of the overpowering fumes accompanying the explosion of melinite, lyddite or pyroxoline was noticed after the explosion and it is thought the bomb was charged with camphor dynamite which is extensively used in loading the revolutionists' bombs, and which explosive was employed in the assassination of Alexander II. Among its advantages is the fact that it is safer to handle than ordinary dynamite and it is more powerful.

While the correspondent of the Associated Press was at the Stolypin villa, a piece of torn, bloody paper was taken from the fragments of flesh representing the dead revolutionists. This was the Premier's sentence of death, passed on him by the fighting organization of the social revolutionists, and which, contrary to the usual custom, was not sent to the Premier in advance. With what was left of the revolutionists three revolvers, two of them automatic, were found.

WILL OF LATE MR. GODWNI.

Entered For Probate Yesterday at Lumberton—Quarter of Million.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Lumberton, N. C., August 25.—The will of the late Berry Godwin was probated and recorded today. As nearly all the estate is in real estate, the exact value is hard to get at. It is worth in the neighborhood of a quarter of a million. The document covers about ten typewritten pages.

It was made the third day of the February past and was witnessed by C. B. Skipper and Q. T. Williams. Messrs. A. W. McLean and Stephen McIntyre are named as executors. Two thousand dollars in money was willed to Sidney Godwin, a niece and the remainder is in practically three equal shares to his daughter, Mrs. Edna Griffith, of Greensboro; his grand-daughter, Mrs. Margaret French McLean, and grandson, Geo. G. French, of Lumberton.

At Mrs. Griffith's death her share goes to Mrs. McLean and Mr. French. Mrs. Griffith, during the term of her natural life, gets 500 acres of land in the county and several town lots. Besides some town lots each of the other two get about 3,000 acres of land each.

A CARD.

Mr. Editor:—It has been said by Dr. Culbreth, a candidate for Representative, that he understood that the voters of the First and Fifth wards were being bought, but that the voters of the middle wards would not or could not be bought, and I would like to say as the citizens of the Fifth ward, and I think I represent a majority of the voters of this ward, that we feel that such thrust as that at our honesty and manhood is uncalled for and erroneous, and to not resent it would be a lasting stigma on our integrity, and hereby do so, and most emphatically refute all such allegations.
